Pennsylvania Cattle Association Honors Those Who Serve

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA) met the end of March for their 22nd annual banquet and membership meeting here at the Pennsylvania Beef Expo.

The association presented several awards, then topped the evening off with a fun auction.

Cattlemen president Bob Hay presented the 1996 Top Hand Award to Glenn Eberly of Milroy, Mifflin County. Eberly signed up the most new members, earning him his award for the second year in a row.

Bill McIntire of Shelocta, Indiana County, earned the Commercial Cattlemen's Award while the Industry Service Award went to John McFadden of Lancater County. McFadden owns Heisch Roussel Agricultural Veterinarian Service. He was recognized for assisting beef and cattle producers.

Cattle Feeder of the Year Award went to Rob Barley of Star Rock Farms. Barley feeds 1,850 steer annually in a three-way partnership. The operation also milks 275 cows and finishes 1,000 hogs.

Dick McElhaney of Beaver County accepted the Seedstock Breeder Award. McElhaney's shorthorn bull "Equity" earned top honors at the 1995 National Shorthorn Show in Denver. The McElhaney family has been involved with shorthorn cattle for 50 years.

John Myers presented the new Environmental Stewardship Award. This went to PCA president Bob Hay of Friedens, Somerset County. Bob and his wife Marianne are managers of ErReR Hill Angus Farm.

The Pennsylvania Charolais Association presented two heifers as part of their Heifer Chain Program. Philip Baer of Brodbacks and Chad Miller of Know received those heifers.

John Myers of Dallastown, York County, received a Charolais Association award for his high indexing bull.

Roxanne Kirst agreed to serve another year as PCA queen. Roxanne lives in Fredericksburg, Lebanon County. Helping her will be Melissa Leiden of St. Lawrence, Cambria County.

The PCA Junior Scholarship Award went to Bill Beinlich of

Terraces Ease 'Water Worries' On Moyer Conservation Farm

ANDY ANDREWS

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — On a spring afternoon two years ago, the rains got the better of the Moyer family.

A five-inch downpour pushed tons of mud and siltwater over the bank of a terrace about 100 feet from the back of their house. The terrace, which serves as a catch basin for runoff from a long, sloping field, simply filled up with dirt, allowing water to overflow.

At the time, the Moyer family was out in the barn, milking. Shortly after the rain had stopped, the entire basement of the house was flooded out from rains that sheeted over the top of a newly planted May corn field. The water was so deep that it crested over the top of foundation stonework on the small, original homestead next to the Moyer house.

The Moyer family, Martin with wife Missy and children, including Sarah, 6, were honored for their work to contain erosion and stop runoff by the Berks County Conservation District at a banquet recently.

Last Call: Dairy Distinction Entries

KINGSTON (Luzerne Co.) — The deadline to enter your farm in the Dairy of Distinction program is Monday, April 15. This program is designed to recognize farms that give a creditable appearance to potential consumers of dairy products who drive past the farm.

In the past 10 years, nearly 600 Pennsylvania farms have received the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program's designation along with a farm sign that can be displayed at the entrance to the farm lane.

Farms are judged on the neat roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings. If you would like your farm to be so designated, complete the entry form found on page D8 of this issue and get it in the mail on Monday.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A 4-year-old Rothrock Tradition Leadman daughter was named grand champion of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association Spring Show, held April 5 in the Large Arena of the state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

The first show of the season, a syndicate comprised of Mark Campbell of Ford City, Alex Claypoole of Worthington, and Doug Beatty of Enon Valley, showed Lyn-Haven Leadman Lilly to win the title of grand champion.

Campbell was a double winner, also having partnership ownership in the reserve grand champion with Robert Morrel, of Cochranton. They showed 5-year-old Pinehurst Jessica, a Walkway Chief Mark daughter, to win the title.

Second in its age class to the open division grand champion was 4-year-old Windy-Knoll-View CC Pear-ET, owned by Justin Burdette of Mercersburg.

That cow was named grand champion of the youth division show and also won honors for being the best bred and owned cow in both show divisions.

Delmarva Broiler

APRIL 10, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds varied, but generally exceeded expectations for a Wednesday. Seller offerings were generally limited on 2.5 to 3 pound sizes; fully adequate on the heavier sizes. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 54 to 66 cents. Trade sentiment was firm. In the parts complex, bone-in breasts, leg quarters and wings cleared well. Boneless skinless breasts were fully adequate.

Prices were unchanged to lower in the Northeast and Midwest, and unchanged elsewhere. The market tone was steady to weak. Demand covered the full range and was light to good, best where retail restocking continued. Supplies were adequate or available for current orders. Prices were lower for the large sizes, and unchanged for mediums. The market tone remained cautiously steady to weak. Truckiot buying interest was limited as dealers were cautious. Offerings were about adequate and becoming more available as plant schedules reach full capacity. Retail and distributive movement was slow with the "Spring Snow" doing little to promote consumer buying activity. The market tone was cautiously steady.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
APRIL 10, 1996

Increased concerns over new crop wheat condition and improved export wheat demand, pushed wheat bids up or near the limit at close today. Corn bids were supported by additional export orders and sharply higher bean and wheat bids. Spillover strength from wheat and corn pits as well as rain delayed harvest in Brazil, boosted bean bids sharply upward. Wheat 15 to 23 cents higher. Corn 8 to 11 cents higher. Sorghum 17 cents higher. Soybeans 12 to 17 cents higher. The weather has played havoc on this years hard red winter wheat crop and traders are seriously concerned. Reports that substantial amounts of hard red winter wheat has been plowed under in some areas due to drought and mite damage, offered support to bids. However, the trade does see that wheat is very overbought and corrections may be made soon. Overnight export sales were very good for wheat but it's been a long time coming. Corn bids jumped sharply higher in response to higher wheat and more good corn exports, was a factor. Soybean bids near that 8.00 mark as reports of rain delayed harvest in Brazil and tight old crop stocks push sharply upward. The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

APRIL 15-21, 1996

ST. ANSELM, APRIL 21.

BLOOMING LIVERWORT & BLOODROOT!

Bloodroot in bloom, Lexington, Mass., 1965" . . . "Hepatica in flower, Lexington, Mass., 1960" . . . so read our old Almanac pages for mid-April, announcing the first spring blooms of these age-old plants. Hepatica, otherwise known as the three-lobed leaves and white or lavender flowers of the liverwort plant, gets its common name from a resemblance to the liver itself. Bloodroot has a fleshy root stock and red juice. Both were once considered remedies, by the Doctrine of Sympathies, for ailments in those departments To the rest of us, they are harbingers of spring.

"Adapt the remedy to the disease." – Chinese proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Apply a plaintain leaf, a drop of vinegar, onion juice, or baking soda and water to relieve a bee sting.

SPRING WATERCRESS SALAD

1 bunch (about 1/4 pound) watercress
1 small red onion
4 eggs, hard boiled
1 small cucumber, peeled
6 to 8 large mushrooms

Dressing:
1/2 cup sour cream
1/8 cup lemon juice
1-1/2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon red or Balsamic vinegar
salt and pepper to taste

Wash and trim watercress, then cut in half. Thinly slice the red onion. Chop the eggs. Slice the cucumber and mushrooms. Assemble all the salad ingredients, layering watercress, then onion, cukes, mushrooms, and eggs. Whisk together salad dressing, pour over salad, and toss.

Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If you want it to rain, cut or burn a fern.

Kill a beetle and it will rain.

When the stars begin to huddle, the Earth will soon become a puddle.

Moist April, clear June.

Special Offer. Handy chart full of interesting weather proverbs Send $3 to Weather Chart, Dept UF, The Old Farmer's Almanac, Box 520, Dublin, NH 03444

OPINION

Dog License Regrets

There is more than a maximum $300 penalty for not having dogs properly licensed in Pennsylvania, as a Pittsburgh-area farm family recently discovered.

According to Dick Hess, chief of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Bureau of Dog Law, a couple of stray dogs recently came onto a farm property near Pittsburgh and killed $20,000 worth of emus (one of several commercial flightless bird species, called ratities, related to ostriches.).

When state dog law officials came to investigate the incident to follow up on the damages claim that could have been awarded for the livestock lost to stray dogs, they discovered that the farm owners' three dogs were unlicensed.

While that seems unrelated to the fact that two loose German Shepherd-looking dogs killed the farm's emus, it turns out that those who fail to license their own dogs can not collect on damages caused by other loose dogs.

Because the farmers failed to pay the $5 annual dog license fee for each of their own three dogs, they became inelligible to collect the $20,000 they would have otherwise received in compensation from the state.

It may not seem fair, and it may seem excessive punishment for not buying a dog license for a farm dog, but it is the law.

While we won't pretend to justify the situation the family faces (we are sympathetic to anyone's loss of earned money), it is what it is — an expensive lesson that those who scoff at state law and fail to properly license their dogs don't stand to reap state benefits from damages from other unlicensed dogs.

For the family that figured buying annual dog licenses too prohibitive at $5 each, how can they justify the loss of $20,000?

Their only apparent recourse now would seem to be to find the owner of the stray dogs that killed the emus and sue for damages (which means more money out of the pocket to hire an attorney); or to seek some political action by appealing to the general public's lack of understanding of the law, the public's general outrage at regulatory government, and the desire of some people to get re-elected.

But, for the rest of us, the real issue here is public safety and accountability.

There is a very real concern about rabies and other diseases easily spread to humans from stray dogs, and also there is real concern about the current prevalence of dog breeds that are known to attack humans.

Those people not registered as kennel owners, who own dogs, must license them not merely to generate funds to pay for dog law enforcement officers, that is part of it, but more so to make law enforcement effective and minimize the risk to public safety from dangerous, unclaimed dogs.

To Call Before You Dig

Are you planning some construction or spring plantings of trees or shrubs? If so, you need to find out if there are any underground utility lines in the path of your planned construction or plantings. To find out, call Pennsylvania One Call System (POCS) toll free at (800) 242-1776.

Pennsylvania law requires that anyone planning to do any excavation must call POCS at least three business days before digging. When the call is made, POCS notifies the utility companies so they can investigate and mark the location of any underground lines they have in the work area.

The system is designed to prevent injuries to workers, interruption of utility services, expensive environmental cleanup costs and local emergencies. So, before you dig, call POCS.

To Be Safe

When working outside this spring, look up. Look up before placing your aluminum ladder for overhead power lines. Stay away from electric lines when painting buildings, installing antennas, or using roofing materials.

When trimming or spraying trees, be careful of overhead lines. Warn children never to climb trees which have power lines running through them or nearby. Keep all chemicals stored and locked when not in use. Carefully read the labels on chemicals before using in the barn and around the farm.

Install all master shields on tractor power take off (PTO) units before starting. Never adjust PTO units while they are operating. Use slow moving vehicle (SMV) emblem on all farm machinery when traveling public highways. You may also want to use a trail escort whenever possible.

Let's make this spring a safe one.

To Check Pastures

Winter can be extremely hard on fences and other structures.

Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, suggests you walk your pastures before grazing them. Spend a little time checking fences for any openings which would allow livestock to go through. In addition, check for any bottles, tires, etc. that passing motorists may have discarded.

Discarded trash may be hard on equipment and may become dangerous projectiles from rotary mowers. Broken glass may hurt livestock. Also, containers may contain toxic substances harmful to livestock if consumed.

Consider rotational grazing or establish an exercise lot with several well-managed paddocks of grass to increase feed and reduce soil erosion.

ON EATING WITH SINNERS

ON EATING WITH SINNERS
April 14, 1996

Background Scripture
Luke 15:1-10
Devotional Reading:
Luke 15:11-24

There has been a lot of controversy in Dallas recently because a large downtown church had made its sanctuary available for several community choruses to present a concert—and then withdrew the invitation when it was discovered that a majority of the members of the one chorus were homosexuals. Thereupon another large downtown church welcomed the choruses to present the program in their church.

The purpose of this column is not to explore the question of homosexuality and the Christian churches. That would require a lot more space and time than I have available to me. It is rather to raise the question of how far the Christian can afford to distance him or herself from those whom he or she judges to be "sinners." This was the issue involved in the illustration above. The first church regards homosexuality as a sin and believed that permitting the choruses to use their church would be tantamount to condoning it. The second church took the position that whether of not homosexuality is a sin, the church would not be compromising its faithby permitting the choruses to use their facilities.

This is also the issue that confronts Jesus and his disciples in Luke 15, where we are told, "Now the tax collectors and sinners were all drawing near to hear him. And the Pharisees and the Scribes murmured, saying, 'This man receives sinners and eats with them'" (15:1,2). Please note that Luke does not say that these people are "reformed" or "penitent" sinners, or that they have taken the pledge to sin no more. Luke calls them simply tax collectors and sinners."

NOT COMPROMISED

Apparently, Jesus, the Son of God, did not believe that his virtue or spirituality—nor that of his disciples—would be compromised by being with tax collectors and sinners. Eating with them was not a problem for him either. If indeed these people are "sinners," Jesus doesn't even condemn or condone their sins.

I note this only to ask, if Jesus and his disciples did not shrink from civil intercourse with known sinners, why do we? Is our moral superiority of a higher order than his? If he treated these sinners with respect and kindness, why shouldn't we?

For one thing, Jesus understood that the branding of these people as "tax collectors and sinners" by the public at large—and even Luke—did not really put them in a level of morality lower than that of the Scribes and the Pharises and even his disciples. You and I may judge someone to be on a lower moral order than we, but that doesn't make it so. The fact is, every one of us belongs in the category of sinner. Our sins may be more subtle or hidden—like dishonesty and pride—but that doesn't necessarily put us on a level where we can afford to judge other sinners.

WHICH SINNER?

I remember the story of a man who despised his neighbor. One day, this man, a man prominent in his church, cried out, "Oh, Lord, let your judgment be upon this sinner." Back came God's reply: "Which sinner?" The second principle is apparent in the two parables that follow the incident in Luke 15—the one lost sheep and the woman with the lost coin. God not only accepts the lost people of the world, he actively and perseveringly seeks to find them.

To the "lost," it is everlasting good news to know that there is "more joy in heaven over one sinner who repents than over ninety-nine righteous persons who need repentance" (15:7). To the self-righteous judges of others, it is the worst news we will ever hear. So when the Scribes and the Pharisees murmur, "This man receives sinners and eats with them," we ought to say, "Thank God!"

The Althouses will lead a group to the Holy Land, Oct. 9 to Nov. 2, 1996. Space limited. For information,write them at 4412 Shenandoah Ave., Dallas, TX 75025.

PURSUIT® IS NOW LABELED FOR ALFALFA.

(Is that the gasping of weeds we hear?)

Up until now weeds had it somewhat easy. Decreasing the forage quality of your stand with no real threat of punishment. That's about to change. Luckily, there's a new tool to help you manage your alfalfa — PURSUIT® herbicide. PURSUIT provides you with both contact and residual control of the toughest broadleaf weeds and grasses in alfalfa, leaving you with the highest forage quality possible. So don't let weeds have the upper hand this year. Use PURSUIT on alfalfa. For more information see your local AgriCenter dealer or simply call 1-800-942-0500.

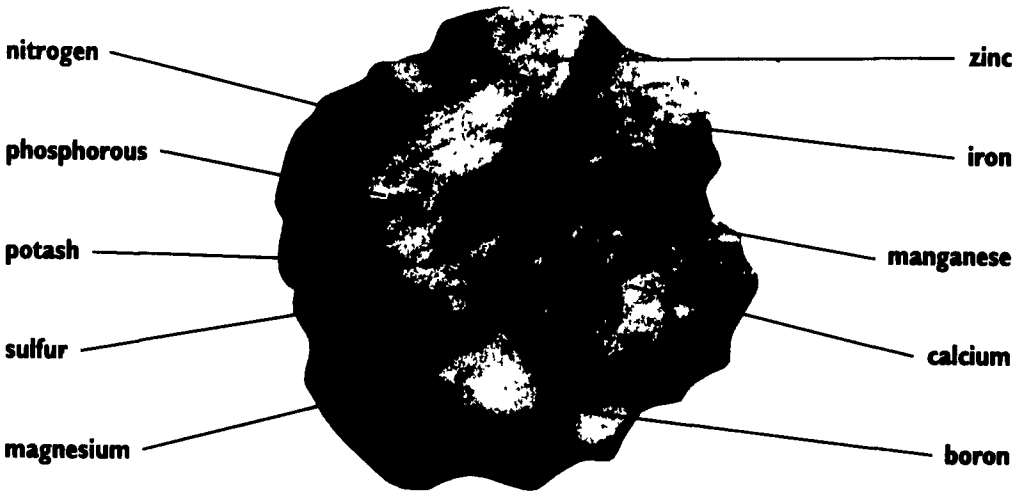
Lebanon Extra Plant Food

For over 47 years, farmers have been choosing Lebanon Extra for premium homogeneous/ammoniated plant food. Lebanon Extra is ideal for use in row applications where nutrient safety and consistency is crucial to yields. And its homogeneous/ammoniated granules offer superior performance over so-called "Custom-formulated" blends.



A blend of raw materials can result in uneven feeding. Unlike homogeneous/ammoniated granules which deliver all the primary nutrients and micronutrients in each particle — ensuring even distribution for consistent performance.

Lebanon Conservation District Tours Farms

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON COUNTY — Although change in farming practices can be dramatic, it is not always apparent to the rest of the farming community, must less to the general population.

In that consideration, the Lebanon County Conservation District recently sponsored a tour of seven farms in the county to provide a demonstration of the types of soil, water and nutrient conservation practices that are being installed on area farms.

The program was held by the Lebanon County Conservation District in cooperation with with the county's Chesapeake Bay effort and USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS, formerly the Soil Conservation Service).

Those visited who have adopted or plan to adopt some of the practices, most using cost-sharing, said they see benefit not only for conservation of resources on their farms, but also benefits to the operation of their farms.

Farms visited included the Gary and Barbara Lentz dairy farm, Dream-On Holsteins, well-known to area Holstein breeders; the Dave and Christine Williams farm, featured in Lancaster Farming for conservation practices and for lifestyle; the Thomas Shuey dairy farm with an existing cost-shared manure storage in the development of a spring development project and waterway construction; the Barry Donmoyer dairy operation with a huge top-loaded manure storage facility; the Harry Buck dairy farm; the Peter Hanson farm with a self-installed stream crossing and cost-shared streambank fencing (without permitting public access); and the Richard Wizar farm and nursery, where a federally cost-shared wetland has been constructed within the past year.

The tour was primarily arranged by Douglas Wolfgang, agricultural resources coordinator for the Lebanon County Conservation District, but also had assistance by Ann Fackler with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, and Johan Berger, representing the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Berger was involved with the stream fencing project at the Hansen farm.

Fackler, a technician for NRCS, designs projects, does field work, inspections, and works one-to-one with farmers on technical aspects of project designs, such as how it fits into the farmer's operational plans, especially if a livestock expansion is to be considered.

She is authorized to design and approve waterways and diversions, spring developments, and well-head protections. She also does official inspections of manure storages as they are being put in.

Not all the farms were Chesapeake Bay contract projects. The Wizar shallow water wetland was done through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and represents the first wetland constructed to specifications in the county that serves as a model of what can be done.

Wolfgang said the overall purpose of the tour was to inform the general public and non-participating farmers on the possibilities of conservation projects through the Chesapeake Bay Program, or others through the Conservation District.

According to Wolfgang, up to $30,000 of Chesapeake Bay Program moneys are available per landowner to assist in the design and implementation of nutrient control and conservation practices.

Other programs can offer cost-sharing or funding or streambank fencing.

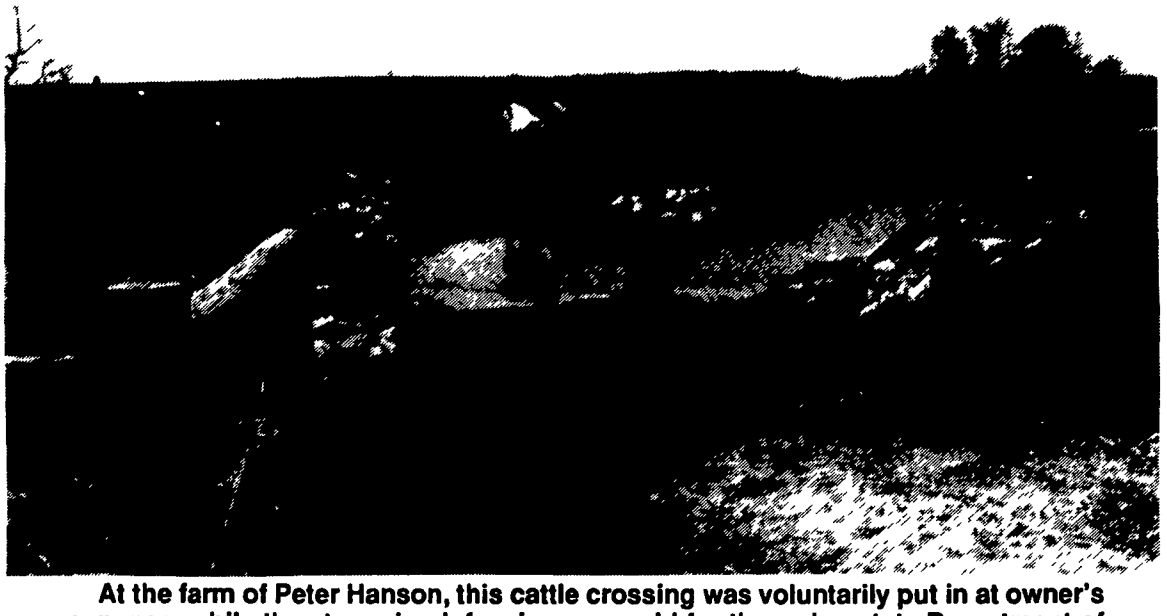
As of the tour, the county held 42 contracts with "high priority" farms in the county's portion of the Chesapeake Bay watershed.

"High priority" farms are those with serious problems needing immediate help.

(Turn to Page A22)

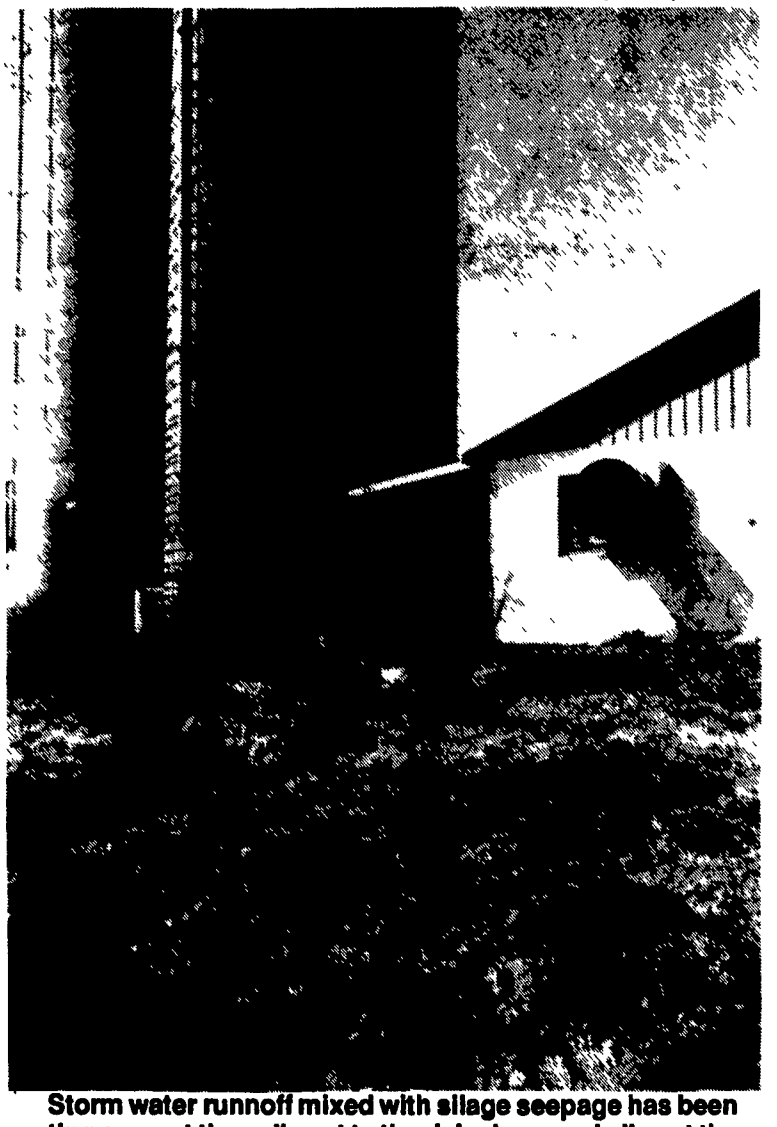
Ann Fackler, wearing sunglasses, with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, talks about the shallow water wetland installed on a farm through cost sharing with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Doug Wolfgang stands in front of this manure storage facility for Gary Lentz's (second from left) Holstein herd and discusses some of the considerations made in constructing the facility.



At the farm of Peter Hanson, this cattle crossing was voluntarily put in at owner's expense, while the streambank fencing was paid for through a state Department of Environmental Protection conservation program.

Dressed in coveralls, Gary Lentz, owner of this farm, talks with members of a Lebanon County Conservation District farm tour who look at this manure storage facility which handles the manure from his replacement heifers.



Storm water runnoff mixed with silage seepage has been eating away at the soil next to the dairy barn and silos at the Dave Williams farm. A concrete pad to collect and air dry silo seepage, and a stormwater diversion are planned as corrective measures.

21" MULCHING MOWER

Push and Self Propelled

(Also Available: 21" convertible mower for mulching or bagging)

Engineered like no other lawn mower in the world!

The new McLane mulching mower features a high-lift steel blade and a new deck configuration which create a super vacuum that holds grass blades upright for maximum cutting efficiency. The clippings are forced through a special recirculation chamber and down into the mower path for recutting. This recutting process is repeated over and over again until the clippings are pulverized into a fine mulch. This mulch is then driven deep into the lawn, returning nutrients and moisture to the soil. Grass clippings and leaves virtually disappear.

Lebanon Conservation District Tours Farms

Overall, the projects offered through the Conservation District should not be seen as intrusions into otherwise healthy farming practices. That simply is not the truth.

The farms that have gotten project help through the Conservation District had serious problems — problems that created significant health concerns and put them at risk of prosecution for pollution.

The people involved have farming backgrounds or are sensitive to farm needs and desires for efficiency. Overall, Wolfgang said the conservation practices can be seen as community health projects.

"Looking on the broad spectrum, the practices ultimately help the Chesapeake Bay, but they also improve farm efficiency and local water quality, even as localized as well-head protection," Wolfgang said.

Wolfgang grew up on a grain farming operation in Schuylkill County where his father had implemented a conservation plan, installing contour strips, grass waterways and diversions.

Relatively new to Lebanon County, starting there in the fall of 1994, Wolfgang said he grew up seeing the benefits of installing conservation practices.

The Lentz farm was the first farm visited. The Bay contract work done there included two cemented manure holding facilities on the original home farm — one at the original site on the bank of the Swatara Creek, the other at a newer dairy facility built to keep the milking string.

The older farm site had a manure storage facility installed and is being used to keep the replacement heifers. Lentz said that his father had moved to the farm in 1959 when Gary was 10 months old. Growing up, the manure from the barn lot and the milkhouse used to go into the stream. It no longer does.

He also had some stream fencing installed and did some spring development and protection work on a spring that is adjacent to the original farmstead foundation (that now is the site of children play structures).

Lentz told the group that he was very pleased with the structures built.

He said he first got involved with the Conservation District in 1985 and in 1988 began building.

Further west and north of the Lentz farm, the tour visited the Williamses farm. The operation has undergone significant changes since the Williams have had the farm.

The land under farm includes a large interior bend of the Swarata Creek near Jonestown. The low lying land had been under crop cultivation, with a slim wooded buffer along the stream.

The Williamses have since converted most of that into a pasture crop for intensive grazing, while retaining some of the higher ground for some silage, grain and hay crops. That operational change helped the profitability of the farm, and at the same time created a more environmentally sound operation.

However, the former owner of the cow barn apparently created his own manure storage pit by backhoeing the fill next to the barn foundation.

(Turn to Page A23)

Almost amazingly, this earthen manure pit was expanded by a previous owner by excavating soil next the foundation of this cow barn. The barn foundation needs to be shored up, while a cemented manure storage is planned to correct the site.

WARNING!

An odorless, colorless, invisible--and costly-- forage thief!

You can't see it--and you can't stop it. Storage losses in forage can steal your valuable crop--how much is lost depends upon how you store your feed.

- Tower Silos have Up to 8% loss
- Bunkers have Up to 45% loss*

If the average difference in feed lost between tower silos and bunkers is 30%, then storage of 1000 tons will mean 300 tons MORE lost in a bunker. If silage is valued at $30 per ton, the additional losses from bunker storage would be $9000 per year.

For information on losses for all types of crop storage methods, contact the Crop Storage Institute for your free copy of "Methods of Crop Storage" and "Know the Facts."

Lebanon Conservation District Tours Farms

The earthen pit will be replaced with a cemented pit of about the same holding capacity (though not as much as a non-grazing operation would require), while the barn foundation is repaired.

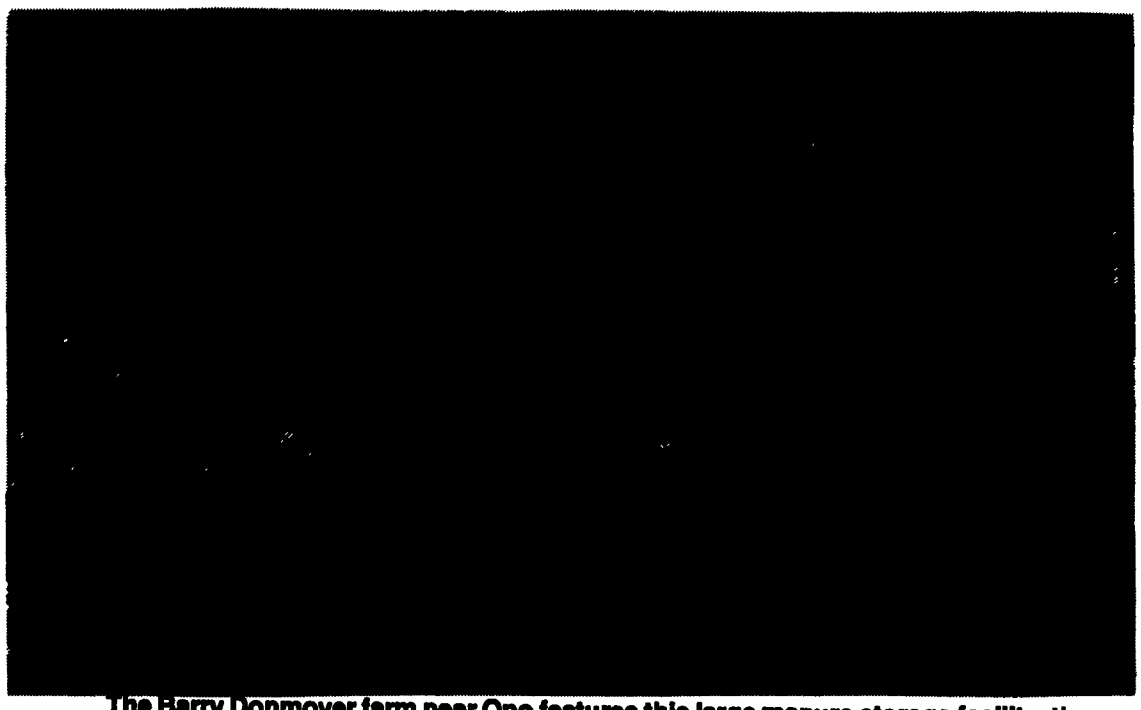
The foundation and walls are beginning to crack from the lack of support and apparently because of the saturation.

Also, to handle some of the silage "juice" drainage that has been mixing with stormwater runnoff adjacent to the barn, stormwater is to be rerouted, and silage drainage is to be diverted onto a cement drying pad.

Actually, silage drainage is very high in nutrients. In Europe, silage drainage has been of concern for some time.

At the Donmoyer Farm, further west along the Swatara, the former front pasture was messy and wet from being used heavily as an excercise lot.

A 130-foot diameter storage facility is the largest the Lebanon Conservation District helped establish with 87,582 cubic feet of storage. The farm has 585 acres on which to spread manure.



The Barry Donmoyer farm near Ono features this large manure storage facility, the largest installed in Lebanon County under Chesapeake Bay Program cost-sharing.

The storage facility was built to accept manure and milkhouse waste and stormwater drainage from around the outside of the tank was installed to prevent the area from becoming around it from becoming saturated and interferring with equipment.

A grass waterway diversion was also installed. While the facility is large, Donmoyer plans expansion.

At the Harry Buck farm, a stream crossing, stream bank fencing, a grass buffer to handle nutrient-laden runnoff and stormwater management are called for. Currently, field surface drainage comes right through the farmhouse yard, while runoff from the animal excercise lot drains almost directly into a stream.

A long-used farm vehicle stream crossing also has created an erosion problem. While the Buck farm was not yet under contract, it was considered a formality.

Once the project designs are finished and the bidding process is complete, a contract is expected to be completed.

The Pete Hanson farm site, near the Deodate area in the northwestern part of the county, displayed an installed stream crossing and streambank fencing at a heifer facility. The Hanson's sacrificed several additional feet of land on either side of the stream bank to minimize fencing and fence angles and to maximize the effect of fencing on the stream.

Obviously in place for some months, wildlife could be seen in the protected area, and the stream conditions seemed improved.

The Richard Wizar farm is located west of Cornwall, visible from Rt. 322. The large wetland occupies what had been historically a too wet area to crop or pasture effectively.

Surprisingly, even though the land was less than useful for cropping or pasturing, the soils were not defined as wetlands.

Basically, the shallow water wetlands was created by shallow excavation and creating a berm, more than a dam. A stream flow nearby, but the wetlands doesn't block stream flow, nor appear to have a significant affect on raising the stream temperature (thermal pollution).

Along very recently constructed, the wetland was already filled with waterfowl.

Work to establish a cover crop on the berm and finish details is to occur this year.

Aesthetically, the wetland can be expected to add to the attraction of the farm, which operates a landscaping nursery, and also provide a source for raising aquatic plants for sale.

For more information on what projects can be initiated on a farm, contact a local conservation district.

Terraces Ease 'Water Worries' On Moyer Conservation Farm

"We never got pictures of the flooding because we couldn't get into the house to get the camera," said Martin Moyer.

The corn was already planted and the fields were washed out.

Newly installed terraces were ripped up and had to be redone.

But the Moyer family set to work. By the next spring, additional terraces were installed to collect and channel water and to prevent further flooding and erosion.

Since then, happily, the Moyers believe their "water worries" have been put to rest.

The Moyer family — Martin with wife Missy and children Jeffrey, 13, Amy, 12, Kristen, 7, and Sarah, 6 — were honored for their work to contain erosion and stop runoff by the Berks County Conservation District at a banquet recently.

During an interview with Lancaster Farming at their Marion Township farm, the Moyers, who were featured in the Sept. 7, 1991, issue of Lancaster Farming, spoke about the challenges of working in an area that is heavily sloped with some highly erodible land.

Altogether, the Moyers manage about 128 acres, 108 of which are tillable. They grow 75 acres of corn, 30 acres of alfalfa, 18 acres of barley (double-cropped), and about 20 acres of rye (double-cropped). They maintain about seven acres of meadowland that they hope to turn into a rotational grazing system.

The Dairy of Distinction farm includes grade Holsteins and registered Brown Swiss. They milk about 62 cows altogether, with about the same amount of replacement stock. Missy cares for 15 head of registered Brown Swiss.

For the Holsteins, herd milking averages on DHIA stand at 20,454 pounds; for the Brown Swiss, they milk about 16,295 pounds, as of the latest test.

Martin's father, Charles, purchased the farm in 1974. Martin began milking in 1980 at the farm. As he did at the beginning, Martin is in charge of the fieldwork, including additional acreage.

Martin grew up in Bernville on the home farm and married Missy in 1981. Two years ago, Martin and Missy purchased the farm from Martin's father, who recently passed away. Martin also manages about 800 acres of other ground with his brothers Paul and Llwellyn in Bernville.

The Moyers have gradually added to the herd and made major conservation improvements to the farm.

Managing the highly erodible land proved difficult since the time it was purchased. At that time, the farm was in strip crops to contain erosion. But Martin's father wanted the entire ground to be in corn. "My dad wanted big fields, and this was big fields," he said.

Moyer said, "Pop was working at conservation practices for as long as I know, doing some things at the home farm."

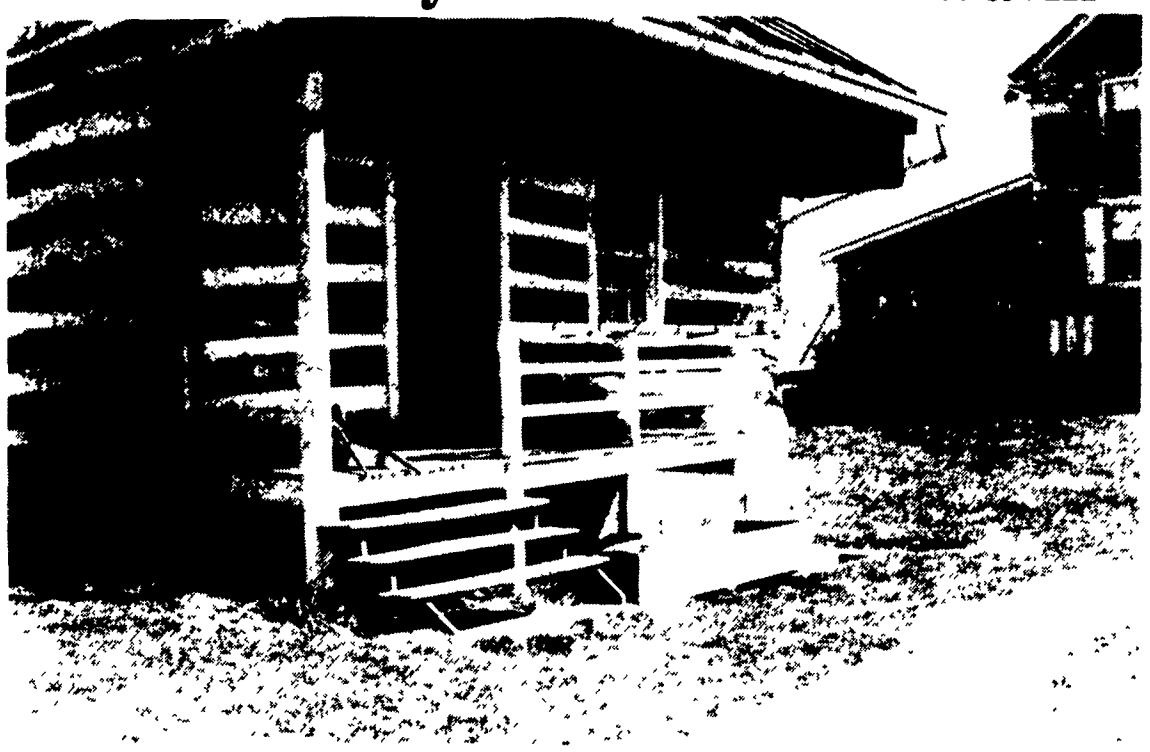
At the Womelsdorf farm, however, putting the ground mostly in corn proved costly. When it rained, "we had erosion — terrible erosion," admitted Martin.

Moyer knew that it was a mistake to remove the strips. But something had to be done.

"After I started milking here again, I wanted to put these back into strips, so we checked with ASCS and got involved with soil conservation."

That was about eight years ago. Moyer admitted that while not everything wasn't done in a year, the water problems mounted.

After some of the terraces were installed, "they had that terrible rain, and they all filled up with mud, and they had to do them again," said Missy.



At the time, the Moyer family was out in the barn, milking. A short while after the rain had stopped, the entire basement of the house was flooded out from rains that sheeted over the top of a newly planted May corn field. The water was so deep that it crested over the top of foundation stonework on this small, original homestead, left, next to the Moyer house.

Martin hates to think what the land would have been like if they hadn't started to install some kind of water "catch basins."

The problem? Too many neighboring waters coming into their land.

"We were getting runoff from the neighboring farms, and we put the terraces in to stop the water," said Moyer.

In all, the farm conservation plan includes 8,365 feet of terraces, 4,700 feet of undreground outlets, 1,750 feet of diversions, 300 feet of grassed waterway, 20 acres of stripcropping, and 69 acres of crop residue management.

The terraces were the real key to stopping the flooding and erosion. But it's "something that's going to have to be maintained," said Moyer.

"I'm not near done with the soil conservation practices yet, but we're still trying to get our strips worked around."

Between terraces, Moyer is busily sowing alfalfa, much like the stripcropping on the farm of years back.

(Turn to Page A26)

The terraces were the real key to stopping the flooding and erosion. But it's "something that's going to have to be maintained," said Moyer. Moyer shows the pipe inlets from one terrace.

VIRGINVILLE (Berks Co.) — Individuals were honored for their support of the Berks County Conservation District at the annual banquet recently at the Virginville Grange.

Educator of the Year honors went to Christine Williams, seven-year Tulphehocken High School ag science instructor. Williams was honored for her instrumental work in involving students in land judging, conservation public speaking, Envirothon competition, and as adviser to the young adult farmer program.

Special $1,000 scholarships were presented to two students, Tara M. Plewa and Janice R. Youse. Tara, a Twin Valley High School senior, has excelled in classwork at the school and was a member of the first place Envirothon team for four years. The daughter of Richard and Susan Plewa, Honey Brook, Tara is co-president of the Twin Valley FFA and vice president of the county FFA. A gold medal winner in the Pennsylvania FFA forestry contest, Tara has been accepted at the Penn State College of Ag Sciences and plans to major in forestry.

Janice R. Youse, daughter of Paul and Linda Youse, Oley, is an Oley Valley High School senior. Janice has served on the local 4-H club and the Oley FFA chapter in many official capacities, and is a member of the 1990 Reading Fair farm family. She has been accepted at Penn State Berks Campus to major in food science and ag business.

Conservation Farmer of the Year went to Martin C. Moyer, a dairyman from Marion Township. Moyer is profiled in this issue of Lancaster Farming.

A special recognition award went to the Berks County Farm Bureau for the development and implementation of conservation concerns.

Chesapeake Bay recognition went to Robert J. Geib, Bethel poultry farmer and conservationist; Gerald H. Seiler, Bethel conservation farmer; and Eugene O. Yenser, Myerstown conservation farmer.

Special conservation service honors went to Roger Mallon and Bob Entler. Mallon, operations manager of Wall Music Stores, is the outdoors writer for the Reading Eagle-Times. Bob Entler, Temple, is a self-employed carpenter and home builder. Both Mallon and Entler are co-hosts of outdoor broadcast specials.

A special media award went to George G. Landis, resident of Penn Township. Landis began at the Reading Eagle in October 1960 and served as county editor from 1965-1982. He has served as agricultural reporter since July 1993 and was honored at the 1994 Farm City Banquet for the promotion of agriculture in Berks County.

Exemplary erosion and sediment pollution control design went to Spotts, Stevens and McCoy, Inc. The landscape maintenance award went to Allen Heilner, Heilner Landscaping Co., Inc.

A 50-year service pin went to Curtis Bashore, Bethel, one of the original charter members when the district began in August 1946.

Pa.DHIA Introduces Internet Services

PAT TORETTI

Pennsylvania DHIA is now offering Internet services to users of the Pa. DHIA ARIS system and its laboratory bulletin boards, according to Jim Boyer, Pa. DHIA's processing center manager.

"We're very excited to be able to extend this kind of service, because it really positions the ARIS system where we've always wanted it," says Boyer.

"Internet access to our mainframe allows us to present things like news, electronic mail, and file transfer services to our customers. These options save us on 1-800 long distance charges while providing significant new functionality for our customers.

"For example, an ARIS user can now receive a notification that his reports are available via e-mail, without ever having to dial the mainframe in State Collge.

"He can also pick an option that allows us to send reports directly to his e-mail account or Internet service provider if the provider offers that kind of feature, or, he can retrieve the reports via FTP (file transfer protocol) or the more conventional ARIS downloads.

"If the customer's Internet account offers the option, he can even dial directly into the DHIA mainframe via telenet at speeds up to 56 KBPS, or even faster," Boyer said.

"We're looking for dairymen, vets, and consultants who want to participate in the program right now," Boyer said, "It's available to anyone interested.

"For ARIS customers who've been meaning to get online with the Internet, this is a good reason to start. The system is really a great deal easier to use over a high speed IP connection than via the traditional modem-to-mainframe vehicle. And front-ends like the Microsoft Internet Explorer, Mosaic, or Netscape Navigator make the program easier to use."

The DHIA processing center has big plans for exploiting the information super highway that has literally exploded in the past few years.

Pennsylvania will be introducing a home page on the World Wide Web with links to supporting industries like breed associations, AI studs, and farm publications, and will offer news, electronic mail, advertising and other services to industry cooperators, consultants, and members in the coming weeks.

"The real power of the Internet is in commerce," Boyer said. "And a great deal of that capability remains untapped. But combine the recent communications deregulation, the number of new vendors online every day, and enhanced privacy and security programs for financial transactions with the number of users plugged into the Internet and we are talking about some really phenomenal opportunities in the coming year," he said.

"There are millions of people already connected to this world via America Online, CompuServe, or their own local provider. And MCI and AT&T are even getting into the act."

"We're just overwhelmed by the possibilities right now," said Dave Slusser, PA DHIA's general manager. "At a time when a lot of people — especially those with their own personal computers — are questioning the value of DHIA, the new services we're implementing showcase the great benefit of belonging to a cooperative association.

"For example, one service we envision offering would allow people to offer advertising to purchases who want heifers. A dairyman on our heifer program will be able to hook up with buyers literally anywhere in the world. And by providing a one stop shopping center with database capability, those buyers will be able to fill orders for the exact kinds of numbers of calves they want easily and quickly.

"That gives real value to both the purchases and the seller, and that's something you can't do with a computer all by yourself," Slusser said.

"I see us being able to connect dairymen to the right vets, feed mills, equipment dealers, and financial consultants to solve the problem of their individual farms. That kind of networking operation just won't be available to people who're isolated from DHIA."

The visual impact of the Web is expected to help Pennsylvania DHIA sell and explain new services like the Milk Urea Nitrogen testing introduced last October.

Benchmarks, graphs, and other explanatory information will be available online. And the interactive nature of the Internet will allow interested members and support people to actually walk through training and educational materials as they become available.

"For instance, we regard performance economics as being one of the most important areas for our farmers as the money situtation tightens on so many farms," Slusser said.

"With the right programming on a web page, we can actually show a farmer how to use the information on a 1040F to fill out the DHIA barnsheet to get maximum impact from our Performance Economics program."

Although the new services will not be limited to ARIS patrons, current users of PA DHIA's ARIS system who are interested in accessing ARIS via their Internet accounts can contact Dan Smith at 1-800-DHI-TEST.

Be sure to let him know your e-mail address and the particulars of your computer system when you call.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania. Remember these are averages so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Terraces Ease

What matters most is "rethinking" practices that so many farmers have been accustomed to over the years. Many would plow up 20 or more acres of ground, not thinking about possible erosion problems. Now it's safer to work on 4-5 acres at time, and keep erosion controls in place.

In 1980, the Moyers installed a concrete-bottom, earthen-side manure holding pit. Moyer expects to add a heifer manure holding pit sometime in the future. Also, Moyer has a carefully drawn up nutrient management plan for his farm, written for him by the district.

Other farms are taking heed. Moyer admitted so seeing a "lot of water being run away" on nearby farms, but "there are going to be more farmers putting terraces in."

The Moyers have participated in an ASCS cost-share program for the work of paying for the heavy earth-moving equipment and labor to create the terraces. The cost-share pays about 80 percent of the terrace installation fees. Without that money, Moyer said he "wouldn't have done it."

Work in the future will involve turning the seven acres of pasture into a rotationally grazed system.

But the terraces have proved to be a soil-saver.

"They're in there now and I know my ground will be protected," he said. "We just have to learn to farm them."

HERE'S THE SEQUENTIAL FOR ANY TILLAGE PRACTICE.

A sequential program of PROWL® herbicide soil applied, followed by PURSUIT® herbicide early post, gives you season-long control of over 50 weeds and grasses in your soybeans.

PROWL, applied up to 45 days before planting, controls tough grasses and lambsquarters. And, because of its surface stability, PROWL provides maximum flexibility.

PURSUIT, applied early post, provides broad-spectrum control of grasses and broadleaf weeds. Through contact and residual activity, PURSUIT will keep your fields clean all season.

No matter what conservation or conventional tillage program you choose, PROWL followed by PURSUIT gives you the most effective and flexible weed control possible. See us about PROWL and PURSUIT.

The sequential program for any tillage system.

Water Withdrawal Registration Can Benefit Farmers

DAVE HEICHER
Program Specialist
Susquehanna River
Basin Commission

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Have you ever been concerned about your farm's water supply? Maybe you should be.

Disputes over water use have long been part of this nation's history — whether they have been between neighboring states, municipalities, or adjoining property owners. Areas that have experienced population, industrial, or commercial growth are at increased risk for water use conflicts. The potential for conflicts also increases during times of drought.

During the drought of 1995, many small streams in the New York portion of the Susquehanna River basin went completely dry or were reduced to a mere trickle. Even larger streams such as the Tioughnioga, Chenango, Chemung, Cohocton, Canisteo, and upper Susquehanna Rivers had severe reductions in flow.

The situation also was critical in the Pennsylvania and New York portions of the basin, where many streams and rivers had flows that were far below normal summertime levels. In September 1995, flow in the Susquehanna River at Harrisburg was as low as 2,360 cubic feet per second (cfs), compared to the long-term average September flow of 11,410 cfs.

By the end of August 1995, 30 Pennsylvania water systems instituted voluntary or mandatory water restrictions because of drought conditions. More water systems followed suit in September.

Although many agricultural operations were affected by the drought, the impact on farmers was not nearly as great as it would have been if the drought had occurred earlier in the growing season.

If you live in the Pennsylvania portion of the Susquehanna River basin, you can help protect your existing water needs through the Susquehanna River Basin Commission's (SRBC's) agricultural water withdrawal registration program.

Registration is required for all types of surface and ground-water withdrawals in the Pennsylvania portion of the Susquehanna River basin that exceed 10,000 gallons per day averaged over a 30-day period.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in consultation with the SRBC, is adminstering the registration program for industrial, municipal, institutional, and recreational withdrawals.

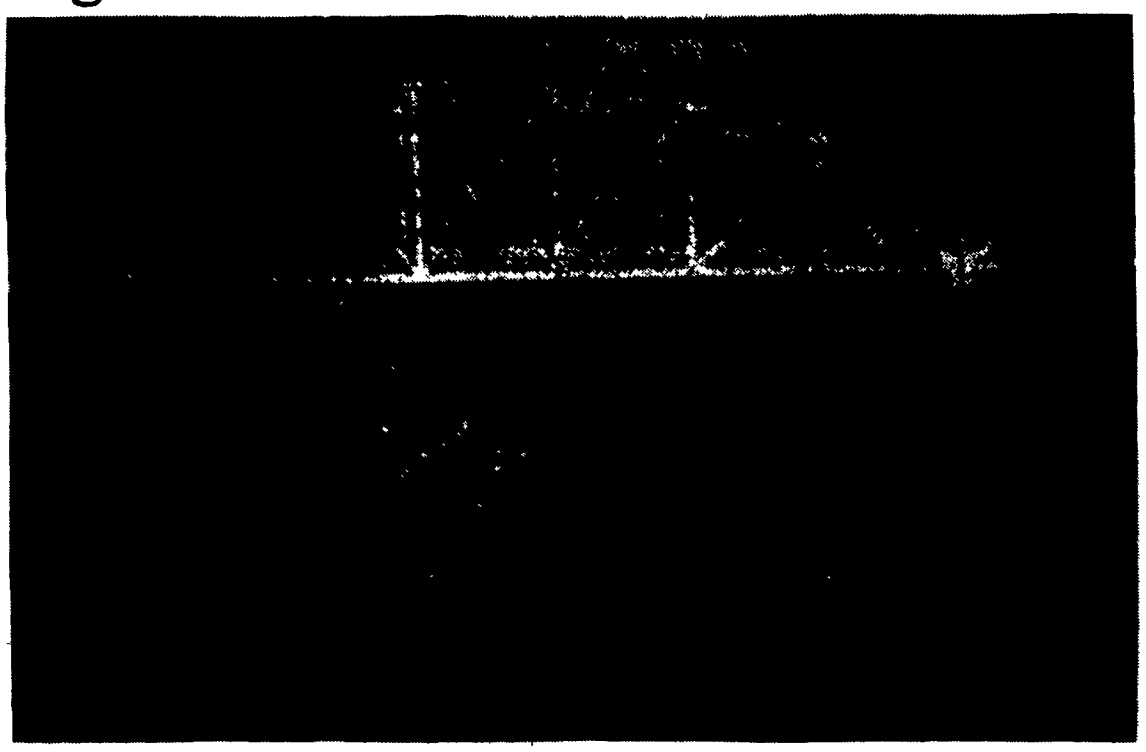
The SRBC is handling the agricultural water withdrawal registration program. There is no fee associated with registration.

By registering, you can:

- Document your existing water use to establish a stronger legal position if future water use conflicts develop.
- Have your water use needs considered, especially during times of drought.
- Assist the SRBC in making wise water management decisions that can affect your farm.
- Bring your farm into compliance with the registration program.

Some examples of agricultural operations that would typically use more than 10,000 gallons per day include:

- Commercial irrigation of cropland.
- Dairy operation with more than 200 cows.
- Beef cow/calf operation with more than 500 cows.



1995 low flow conditions in the Sinnemahoning Creek in Cameron County.

- Beef finishing operation with more than 1,000 head.
- Swine feeder production operation with more than 900 sows.
- Swine farrow to finish operation with more than 250 sows.
- Swine finishing operation with more than 2,000 hogs.
- Poultry operation with more than 250,000 pullets or broilers.
- Poultry operation with more than 125,000 layers.
- Poultry operation with more than 100,000 turkeys.

The above list should only be used as a general guide to the types of farming operations that use 10,000 gallons per day. Farmers with several types of operations and those that operate evaporative cooling systems will need to consider their total water use.

Although farmers withdrawing less than 10,000 gallons per day are not required to registere, they may wish to do so to protect their existing water use.

If you are a Maryland farmer in the Susquehanna River basin, your water withdrawal information will be provided to the SRBC by the State of Maryland, eliminating your need to register separately.

In New York, farmers are presently unable to register their withdrawals with the SRBC because the state has not yet approved the SRBC registration program.

Many agricultural groups and individuals worked long and hard with the SRBC to develop the registration program. The SRBC also held a series of public hearings before the registration program was adopted.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, and other testified at the hearings in support of the registration

She is the daughter of the Windy-Knoll-View Ultimate Pala cow that Justin's parents showed to championships in past years.

Justin also showed the reserve junior champion animal, also named junior champion of the youth division, a spring yearling heifer, Windy-Knoll-View JJB Cha Cha, out of sire Boulet Charles-ET.

Curtis and Ann Day of Tri-Day Farm in Shippensburg, showed the junior champion, a fall calf, Tri-Day Blackstar Samantha. Their son Matthew Day showed the youth division reserve junior champion, a fall yearling, Tri-Day Astrid, a Duregal Astre Starbuck-ET daughter.

The reserve grand and senior champion of the youth division was a junior 3-year-old Bursh-Creek-Vu Raidr Secret, a bred and owned daughter of Hanoverhill Raider-Et, owned by Amanda Cessna, of Everett.

Penn Gate Farm, owned by Bob Gitt and Steve and Chrissy Wood, Littlestown, was named premier breeder and exhibitor of the show.

The 43rd Pa. Holstein Association State Spring Show was judged by Lowell Lindsay, of Gelph, Ontario.

A number of people helped with the show, announcing, keeping records, and distributing ribbons and trophies. Included were Aliene Thompson, Eldon Ford, Ben Wilson, Colleen Cashell, Jan Harding, Yvonne Peterman, Emily Dum, Art Salisburg, George Cashell, Douglas Baker, Irene Osborne, Heather Oberholtzer, Jennifer Davis, and Angela Boob.

The number of entries was down slightly from last year's spring show. Last year there were 264 cattle checked in, while this year there were 239 counted entries. However, there were a number of new faces this year.

In other business, a PHA administration matter was handled during the show as members of the Pa. Holstein Association Southcentral District held a special election for a board director to fulfill the remaining year in the term of director James Burdette, of Mercerburg, who was elected the association's vice president.

Association bylaw requires a replacement representative from the state officer's district to sit on the Executive Committee. The PHA Executive committe constists of the officers and one director from each of the six PHA districts into which the state is divided.

This ensures that the state officers can commit their efforts for the entire state association, while their home district does not suffer from direct representation.

Since there were enough people from the district present, and enough board members, it was not necessary to hold a special meeting of the state board to appoint a replacement to carry out the rest of the term.

Elected was Creedin Corman of Carlilse, a well-known Holstein breeder who has also been involved as a dairy judge at different shows.

Fire Company Farm Rescue Seminar Held

A volunteer fire company safety and rescue seminar was held last week at Enfield Equipment, Oxford. In many farm accidents, rescue workers do not know about how farm machinery works. So the volunteers are hampered in their efforts to free a farmers hand or leg.

Working with Enfield Equipment, fourty-five members from five fire companies learned about on/off controls, fuel systems, and hydrailcs. Simulated accidents were posed with a dummy, and the participants had to rescue the dummy from under a combine head by jacking up the whole machine; remove a hand from the bale knotter, and dismantle the corn head to free a simulated trapped farmer's leg. The fire companies that participated were: West Grove, Oxford, Cochranville, Unionville, and Wakefield.

Farmers Hold Pitts Rally

CHRISTIANA (Lancaster Co.) — About 50 leaders in the agricultural community announced today that they are supporting Joe Pitts in his candidacy for US Congress. The supporters announced their formation of the "Farmers for Joe Pitts" coalition at a rally held at the Ed and Arlene Harnish Farm, Georgetown Road, Christiana. They will be advising Pitts on agricultural policy. State Representative Art Hershey (R-13) of Lancaster and Chester counties was named Chairman of the organization.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius, a resident of the 16th District and a farmer, was also on hand to support Pitts. "Joe has always been a strong advocate for farmers and agriculture," Brosius said. "He has held a substantial level of responsibility in Harrisburg, and used it wisely. He will be an even stronger voice for agriculture in Washington."

"Joe Pitts is a great friend to farmers,"sid Hershey. "Encroaching development and skyrocketing real estate taxes are threatening the family farm. A changed tax structure and a roll-back of over-reaching government regulations are both needed, and Joe Pitts is the man to get the job done."

"The tax burden is a tremendous problem,"said Pitts. "We need to eliminate the inheritance tax on the family farm and drastically reduce the capital gains tax as well. Real estate tax reform is equally important on the state level. We should consider a shift to an income tax."

"The regulatory situation is also a major problem," Pitts continued. "We should require a cost-benefit analysis on all current and proposed agricultural regulations. Some regulations are needed, but common sense needs to be employed before we tell farmers what they can and can't do."

Before we tell a farmer that he can't use partof his land because it's a 'wetland,' we should have to demonstrate actual environmental impact," he said. "This land belongs to the farmer, not Uncle Sam, and the government shouldn't be telling him how to use it."

With Cargill you get complete nutrition management program - not just feed.
Noah B. Sharp of Belleville, PA has seen the benefits of this process over the last year.

"I have been feeding Nutrena products from Cargill for a little over a year. I've seen improved body condition, better peaks and more persistency. By using the Nutri-Boost amino acid program I have been able to use other new technologies available to dairy farmers. With the Herd Builder calf and heifer program we are raising better replacements that grow faster and healthier. With the Catapult Dry and Fresh Cow program our cows start out the lactation better and peak higher. On test day, there have been several cows over 130 lbs. and this happens to some cows 3 or 4 months in a row. Last August I had 10 cows out of 39 over 100 lbs. for the tester and another 5 over 90 lbs. Much better than I expected in the heat."

More and more dairy operations throughout Pennsylvania, are realizing increased production, better health, and more profit by using a total Nutrition Management Program from Cargill. For more information call us.

Penn State Ag Sciences College Needs More From State

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Penn State University's College of Agricultural Sciences needs more money from the state to keep from continuing its decline of staff and services, University President Graham Spanier said recently.

Spanier was one of several speakers who addressed a group of more than 200 people attending the 20th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative Extension Associations (PCCEA), held April 2 at the Nittany Lion Inn, State College.

Spanier said that Gov. Tom Ridge's proposal to increase state funding for the College of Agricultural Sciences by 2 percent each for extension and research is appreciated, given the fact that almost all other state spending is proposed for some cuts.

However, the request for state funding by Spanier was for an 11.4-percent increase for each of the two budget line items.

Spanier said a 5-percent increase would maintain existing levels of staff and programs.

Because of unfunded, yet federally mandated spending, the university will actually continue to lose its financial strength and ability to retain staff and services at the 2-percent increase level of state funding Gov. Ridge has proposed.

According to a position paper distributed at the meeting, "Excluding the possibility of salary increases, we still face mandated increases in fringe benefits, inflationary costs, and federal base funding at 1.5 percent less this year than the previous year.

"At least 5 percent more in state dollars would be needed just to maintain the College's operations at the existing level and avoid further personnel reductions.

"A probable decrease in federal funds for the next fiscal year, beginning in October 1996, will further erode the College's financial base."

In recent years, state support to the college has been continually decreasing.

State funding to the College of Agriculture began a steady decline for eight years under Gov. Robert Casey. The 11.4 percent increase in funding was an attempt to recover some of those losses.

During Casey's reign, the College of Agricultural Sciences dispursed of its herds of colored breed cattle, sheep and some other animals, reduced extension staff significantly, giving multi-county responsibilities to many agents who specialize in certain areas of expertise, as well as cutting back on other projects.

But over the past 10 years, the College has also had to improve facilities to continue to attract and maintain its students.

It spent about $52 million in upgrading facilities such as the research farms and building new poultry and dairy reseach facilities.

Those expenses were deemed necessary to modernize the College's facilities in order to keep its educational competitiveness and integrity.

Despite the cutbacks, new technology has allowed the College to maintain or increase its quality of educational offerings and community outreach.

But technology can no longer be expected to make up for continued losses of funding and Spanier called upon the members of the PCCEA to do what they can to communicate the message to the general public.

The PCCEA is an organization comprised of county extension boards. Currently all 67 county boards are members at a cost of $125 per year.

After realizing a need during the earlier 1970s, and forming an ad hoc committee in 1975, the PCCEA was formed in 1976 as a support organization for extension programs in the state. It's main goal has been to provide a concerted voice to support the state's extension program.

In literature, the organization describes its five purposes:

- To represent county extension boards in communicating their needs to administration.
- To provide guidance and advice to Penn State so that extension will function most effectively to improve the quality of life in Pennsylvania.
- To develop communications between the dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences and the council concerning its resources.
- To speak to county boards in matters dealing with state or national concerns affecting cooperative extension.
- To keep the public informed of the nature and function of cooperative extension and to promote and support its programs and policies.

Other speakers at the annual meeting inlcuded James Starling, interim dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, who gave a general address about the state of affairs for the College and Extension; Benjamin Nolt Jr., an Extension assistant in the Department of Agriculture and Extension Education, who provided a brief overview of the goals of the 4-H extension program and its hands-on learning and skill development approach; and Michelle Rodgers, assistant regional director for the Extension's Southeast Region, who talked about the benefits of Extension in community affairs and in helping families through educational services and individual help.

Along with 210 PCCEA members who attended the meeting, 25 county commissioners also were present.

County commissioners are encouraged to attend the meeting to find out more about the group and some of the challenges that face Extension.

County government has played a major role in supporting county Extension programs, which were created and continue to operate to provide hands-on educational services, reference sources and direction to those seeking self-improvement in skills or knowledge.

In his talk, Interim Dean Starling said the College is going through a transition and is not as strong as he would like it to be, because of the cutbacks.

However, he said that he was proud of what the College does have to offer.

Citing a former dean who became president of the Kellog Foundation, Starling said that it has been observed that the future of all colleges and universities will depend upon their responsiveness to, and interaction with, the community for which it is to serve.

"That's what Extension has been doing," he said.

He gave many examples of how Extension has been helping individuals and businesses and communities, such as promoting and providing support and expertise with conservation tillage, manure management, integrated pest management, and other critical issues to the community that helps make communities and people self-sufficient and improve the quality of their lives.

He talked about how IPM educational support helped reduce pesticide use by 80 percent in Mercer County without reducing crop yields; how Palmyra Bologna Co. sought and received help to develop a strong working Hazard Critical Control Program (HCCP) in response to a problem experienced in food quality; and how Extension helped develop a Teens and Greens program in Pittsburgh that provides an opportunity for troubled youth to gain self-confidence and develop a trusting community relationship through a street-tree care program that was able continue into a flowers and vegetable growing program after funding dried up.

Starling also noted the 55 satellite downlink sites already installed across the state through Extension and the other sites set to be installed.

Starling also talked about the tenuous position the College is in with funding.

"It is probably the most critical now," he said, noting that since 1991 funding for the college has been flat or decreased.

In that time the college lost 160 positions at counties and at University Park, the Penn State main campus.

He said it has had a negative impact. "Despite the quality (of educational opportunities and support to the community the College) is slowly bleeding to death," he said.

Starling said that Spanier understands this and has been fighting to secure enough funding support to stem the flow.

The graduated and undergraduate student body is strong at 3,200, a 5-percent increase over last year and a 52-percent increase since 1990. The college has the largest undergraduate student body in the Big 10 and is continuing to grow.

The College has a scholarship program totallying $700,000 covering 400 students, making it the largest scholarship program in the University.

In Extension Starling also discussed the many different collaborations occuring among different land-grant universities with their respective Extension programs.

As one example, he said that Penn State Extension has collaborated with university Extension programs in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and New Jersey, and with the USDA to create a regional fruit tree research and edcuational working group for research and extension.

It is supported by a regional council of fruit producers.

Other examples of collaborations with agricultural colleges and Extension programs include Penn State and Virginia with poultry (especially turkey), and New York's Cornell University and Penn State for grape research.

Starling has served for 10 years in the dean's office before accepting the interim deanship.

"In the past 10 year-period we made a lot of progress in improving facilities," he said.

But he said that similar to the saying recently popularized by First Lady Hillary Clinton's book — "It takes a village to raise a child." — "It takes a state to have a strong college of agriculture," he said.

That type of consideration is also apparently reversible and expandable — it takes a strong educational system to have a strong state.

Though University President Spanier was not present during Starling's update on the college, when Spanier arrived for his presentation, he was introduced as having said that it was his goal at the 16th president of the Penn State University, to be the top university in the integration of research, community service and education.

He said the Extension model is an excellent model to expand into other colleges within the University.

After taking office last fall, Spanier has embarked on a statewide tour to visis all 23 branch campuses and 67 extension offices and local businesses and high schools.

Well aware of the economic and rebuilding effort needed in the state, in effect he said that it should be the role of a land-grant university to serve the state by being directly involved in the rebuilding effort.

Noting the globalization of the economy, the shifting of environmental oversight from federal to state priority, and reductions of federal spending on agriculture and rural communities, along with more specific state initiatives to build upon some of the state's outstanding natural resources (which were neglected or destroyed during the state's heavily industrialized periods) to serve as a base for economic regrowth, etc., Spanier said that the university should be expected to help the state's residents achieve their efforts to improve their quality of lives.

He said he is seeking a higher increase in state funding for the College of Agricultural Sciences than for the University as a whole, because of the College's importance to the state and its rural and urban communities.

He said that it is his intention to have more of the University's other colleges work with the Extension system through the College of Agricultural Sciences to provide even better technical and cutting edge technological expertise.

It is the responsibility of the university to help the state grow, he said.

Spanier said that in traveling around the state and visiting with Extension and College of Ag Sciences people, he has found most people in good spirit despite the hardships from the cutbacks.

"We cannot sustain continued cuts like this," Spanier told the group. "I'm pushing very hard."

He said, "No educational delivery system has ever done more (than Extension)." He also cautioned that, "We're at an era where it can go one way or the other. We can build on the model and build Extension, or we can sit back an let funding continue to decrease."

Spanier also outlined a proposal to restructure and combine some of the regional campuses and make it possible for students to achieve four-year degrees at branch campuses.

In other business, recognitions were made during the meeting.

Those members leaving the board of directors received Nittany Lion statues.

Marie Schoen, who served as chairperson for this year's annual meeting, received a statue and also a certificate of appreciation; David Quick, who served as chairperson for the PCCEA's Legislative Day activity, received a statue; Betty Woodruff, board vice president for four years, received a statue; Anna Peters, secretary for four years, received a statue and a certificate of appreciation; and Judy Diebold, received a certificate of appreciation.

The Cargill Herd Builder Program - designed to bring your dairy replacements into the milking herd at 22 months of age at mature body size. The results speak for themselves at Thunder Valley Farms in New London, PA.

"We were apprehensive about changing to Herd Builder last year, but we were surprised at how fast the calves take off. At 2 to 3 days of age our calves are eating Herd Builder Starter. We are seeing a better grown heifer calf without the "hay belly" we used to see. We find the calves wean easier and we are able to wean sooner. With the Herd Builder feeds the calves appetites are easily satisfied. Recently, we tried Cargill's new Half-Time milk replacer and found our calves ate even more calf starter earlier allowing us to wean even sooner. This will help us cut back on Milk Replacer costs and raise a healthier calf."

"As a result of the Herd Builder program I am now breeding by body size and not by the calendar. I am getting the heifers to breeding size in 13 months — at least two months sooner. We are pleased with the Herd Builder program and the results from our Cargill nutrition program for the milking herd. Our Cargill representative [Robert Davis, Cochranville, PA] has shown a lot of interest in our operation. He brings us good recommendations, convinces us to adapt new management practices that are profitable, and challenges us to set new management goals."

Marel Raub Named Outstanding NESA Senior

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Marel A. Raub, a Penn State student from Duncannon, was recently named outstanding senior by the Northeastern Student Affiliate (NESA) Division of the American Dairy Science Association and American Society of Animal Science.

The northeast affiliate is comprised of member schools in New England, New York, Delaware, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. The award was presented at this year's NESA meetings held at the University of Delaware.

Marel is a senior at Penn State majoring in dairy and animal science. She is enrolled in the University Scholars program, and her honors thesis relates to labor laws in 28 states and their appliction to agriculture.

She has earned Dean's List recognition for five semesters and was inducted into Gamma Sigma Delta honor society.

Marel's activities in the Penn State Dairy Science Club have been extensive. She served as secretary and corresponding secretary and was named Penn State Dairy Princess for 1994-95.

Marel has displayed a strong commitment to educating dairy youth for the past four years. She was co-chair of the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Quiz Bowl for 1995 and 1996 and helped coordinate 35 club members in writing questions and moderating, scoring, and timing matches.

In 1996, Marel was co-chair of the first Pennsylvania Junior All-Breeds Convention.

In 1996, Marel was co-chair of the first Pennsylvania Junior All-Breeds Convention. Over 110 young people and leaders attended this educational event. She also assisted with Foster Family Farm Day and the annual Dairy Jubilee promotion.

Marel is involved with other campus organizations. She is an Ag Advocate and served on the College of Agricultural Sciences Strategic Planning Committee. She also is a member of Coaly Ag Honorary Society and Alpha Zeta.

On the national level, Marel has earned numerous honors and awards. She was a member of the championship team from Penn State at the National Cattlemen's Association quiz bowl, and she was also a member of the winning NESA quiz bowl team in 1995.

Her oral presentation about nutrient management laws and their impact on Pennsylvania farms earned first place at the 1994 American Dairy Science Association meetings.

Marel plans to attend the Dickinson School of Law beginning in September, with an emphasis in agricultural and environmental law.

program.

Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director of the Pennsylvania State Grange, said, "Agriculture needs to begin documenting its water use to establish a data base for our industry needs. We believe that this documentation is necessary to protect our industry in the event of a severe drought or future water rights battles."

You should register your farm's maximum water withdrawal, which for many farmers occurred last summer. Although the official deadline for registering agricultural water withdrawals is March 31, 1997, the best time to register is now, while the effects of the 1995 drought are still fresh in your mind. Operations initiated after March 31, 1997, will need to register before using water.

Call or write the SRBC and get a copy of the easy-to-use registration form. Forms will also be available from many county conservation district offices. ASPERGILLOSIS IN POULTRY

Patty Dunn, DVM
Animal Diagnostic Lab
Dept. of Veterinary Science

Infections caused by fungi (molds) are relatively sporadic, but important diseases of poultry and most other species of birds.

By far the most common fungal infection in birds is known as "aspergillosis," which is caused by the mold species Aspergillus Fumigatus. Birds appear to be much more susceptible to fungal infections than mammals, probably due to differences in their respiratory and immune systems as well as the unique features of their propagation and housing.

The following are common questions and answers pertaining to aspergillosis in poultry.

• What kind of poultry are affected? Chickens, turkeys and ducks can all be affected, although chickens seem to be the most resistant of the three. Very young birds (less than three weeks of age) are most often affected, but older market turkeys and turkey breeders also tend to develop clinical aspergillosis. As with other respiratory infections, males tend to react more severely than females, which is due to the stress of their faster growth and heavier muscle mass.

• How do birds get infected with Aspergillus? Inhalation of large numbers of mold spores appears to be the primary route of exposure. Spores are the propagative stage of the mold and can be likened to small, round microscopic "seeds," each capable of producing new mold growth if "landing" on material or tissue that can support its growth. Moldy litter, grain, feed, dust and contaminated eggs and hatchery equipment are the common sources of the mold. Shavings from hard wood tend to support the growth of A. Fumigatus better than those from soft wood (pines).

• What environmental conditions favor the growth of Aspergillus Fumigatus in the hatchery and poultry house? Many of the conditions that favor growth of other microorganisms such as bacteria are also good for fungus. Aspergillus Fumigatus prefers a relatively humid, warm environment, abundant oxygen and plant-based substrates (wood shavings, feed). In the poultry house, litter and spilled, moist feed are excellent substrates. Although the pelleting process destroys most mold present in feed or feed ingredients, fungal spores can recontaminate the finished feed, particularly if it becomes wet. Fungus can then grow and spread rapidly. Unfortunately, A. Fumigatus can also grow inside of eggs that may have been contaminated from the environment in the breeder house. Egg incubation temperatures and humidity are very favorable for growth of the mold. If these eggs are broken in the hatchery, millions of spores can contaminate the immediate surroundings and newly hatched chicks will likely develop severe aspergillosis.

• What kind of clinical signs are seen in infected birds? Because the fungus primarily affects the respiratory tract, most signs are related to that system. Labored, rapid breathing and gasping with outstretched necks are common symptoms. Decreased activity, increased thirst and stunted growth are additional symptoms. Ascites may develop in meat type birds secondary to lung damage. Less frequently, Aspergillus Fumigatus can infect the eye or brain, causing eye swelling and neurologic signs. Total mortality during a flock infection is generally less than 10 percent, but can be as high as 50 percent in complicated cases. The onset of clinical signs is often noticed from one to three weeks of age. Hence, aspergillosis is sometimes called "brooder pneumonia."

• What internal lesions are seen in affected birds? In very young birds, small, yellow caseous nodules or disks can be found in the lungs, adjacent air sacs, and occasionally in the trachea or bronchi where they obstruct air flow into the lungs. Older growing or mature turkeys often have extensive plaques of yellow material in the air sac walls. Occasionally in the air sacs actual blue-green/gray "fuzzy" mold can be seen. In the ocular form, caseous nodules are present in the conjunctival sac in the inside corner of the eye or elsewhere under the eyelids. In the nervous form, portions of the brain contain yellow or red discoloration.

• How is the disease diagnosed? Clinical signs and lesions described above are good clues in identifying the infection. However, the lesions can resemble those caused by certain bacterial diseases (E. coli infections, pullorum disease, etc.), and further testing at a diagnostic laboratory may be necessary to confirm the fungal infection. Fungal cultures and microscopic examination of affected tissues are two common laboratory test methods that are relatively rapid for confirmation of aspergillosis.

• How can aspergillosis be treated? Unfortunately, there is no direct medication against this fungal infection that can be mass-applied. Antibiotics have no effect, except if a concurrent bacterial infection is present. Severely affected birds should be culled, and ventilation should be optimized to decrease ammonia and dust. In pet birds and expensive zoological species of birds, aggressive therapy with injectable, oral, or nebulized antifungal medications can be effective. This is sometimes coupled with surgery to remove obstructive fungal masses from the upper respiratory airways.

• What are some management practices that help prevent aspergillosis? In the breeder house, any techniques employed to ensure clean hatching eggs (clean, dry nests, frequent egg collection, low house humidity) and good shell strength will help keep down fungal contamination. Egg storage facilities should be clean and surfaces dry. Care should be taken during transport of eggs to minimize cracks and breakage. In the hatchery, setting only clean, intact hatching eggs is extremely important. Strict hatchery sanitation procedures including the use of disinfectants and fumigants with known antifungal activity are necessary to decrease numbers of fungal organisms invariably present in the environment.

Most hatcheries routinely monitor for fungus and bacteria in the incubators and hatchers. In the poultry house, control measures include thorough cleaning, antifungal disinfection and complete drying of the house between flocks, particularly in the brooding areas; use of high quality, clean, dry soft wood shavings as litter; thorough cleaning, disinfection and drying of feed handling equipment (bins, augers, pans); preventing any wet areas caused by water leakage from water lines, drinkers, etc.; optimizing ventilation to decrease relative humidity and remove dust and gasses; and avoiding overcrowding of birds. As in many poultry diseases, a variety of factors may predispose the onset of aspergillosis. Strict attention to sanitation and eliminating favorable conditions for fungal growth both in the hatchery and at the farm are keys to reducing the risk of aspergillosis in your poultry flocks.

Ag Industry Coalition Forms To Fight For Vet School Funds

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's agriculture industry is again joining forces to persuade the state governor that his proposal to cut funding to the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine is detrimental to the state's agriculture industry, to the health of its residents and the economy, and to the political career of the governor.

On Wednesday at the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce and Industry Building in Harrisburg, located adjacent to the state Capitol Building, an ad hoc committee of the state's agricultural industry leadership met to review with legislators the effects of Gov. Tom Ridge's proposed 27-percent cut in state funding for the institution.

Ridge had proposed a state budget that reduced taxes and seeks cuts in most all spending. As an example, of all the spending proposed for education, only Penn State University's College of Agricultural Sciences and Extension received proposals for increased spending.

However, even that level of increase is actually a decrease and will actually see the College and Extension be forced to continue its decline in staff and services.

The lack of maintenance-level funding for essential agricultural and related educational and research support in comparison to a large proposed increase in state spending on expanding the prison system has been held up by some as incomprehensible.

In his budget address, Gov. Ridge said, "This budget includes $62.2 million for the continued expansion of our prison system. Some in the Capitol will criticize this expenditure. Most Pennsylvanians will not. Those who murder, assault and rape our neighbors must be put away."

Ridge said that he proposed the budget in consideration of an anticipated federal shortfall of $600 million, and assuming that state economic growth and therefore state tax revenue growth will be slow.

Ridge's plan is to deal realistically with the state's economic situation by limiting the amount of taxes collected and limiting the funds spent, in order to allow private investment opportunities and the creation of jobs to follow.

"For the first time in 25 years, state government will spend less than the year before. We (proposed to) cut general fund spending by $30 million. We redirect another $787 million to better reflect the priorities of Pennsylvania. And we cut taxes — $60 million worth. Every cent aimed at job creation and retention. Every cent aimed at the job market of the 21st Century."

That is where the leaders of the coalition that met Wednesday consider that Ridge has either missed the mark or is misinformed.

The ad hoc committee was chaired by Guy Donaldson, who recently took over the presidency of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

The last time an ad hoc committee from the agriculture industry formed to fight cuts in state funding for the state's only veterinarian school Democratic Gov. Robert Casey held office.

As most of the speakers and agricultural leaders said, it was assumed after successfully fighting then to reinstate funding for the vet school that the importance of the school to the state had been established and such debilitating reductions as Ridge has suggested would no longer be proposed.

Speakers included several legislators active in agricultural affairs including Rep. Raymond Bunt, R-Montgomery, majority chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, and Sen. Edward Madigan, R-Williamsport, majority chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

Legislator-farmer Rep. Art Hershey, R-Chester County, also spoke out in support of the school.

Other speakers were Dr. Alan Kelly, dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine, Barry Stupine, associate dean and director of the Small Animal Hospital, and other heads of different areas under the overview of the School.

A last speaker was Dr. Sherbyn W. Ostrich, president of the American Veterinary Association, also an 1963 alumnus of the School.

"This is the best veterinary school in the world," he told the group, capping and supporting the statements of those directly involved with the school that otherwise could be seen cynically as merely self-serving.

However, the facts are that Gov. Ridge has targeted exporting manufactured goods and agricultural products, along with strengthening the tourist industry as key to revitalizing the state's economy.

The School of Veterinary Medicine is integral to Pennsylvania's triparitite system under the state Animal Health Diagnostic Commission.

This just-coming to strength system involves the state Department of Agriculture and its under-construction new testing laboratory in Harrisburg, the Pennsylvania State University and its diagnostic laboratories and reference libraries (it has the largest collection of E. colli bacteria in the world so that those concerned with

An open letter to cattle producers

I have heard numerous comments from neighbors, and others involved in the cattle industry, expressing concern about the possible effects the British BSE (Mad Cow Disease) epidemic may have on American demand for beef, especially as we approach the summer grilling season.

As you know, there have been no reported cases of BSE in the United States. Since 1985, no beef has been imported from the U.K., and since 1989, no British cattle or sheep have been imported in the United States. Despite these facts, the issue has continued to fester within the media and among consumers.

As Chairman of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, I have been in close contact with office staff who, in cooperation with the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, have been closely monitoring and proactively addressing the issue.

Within Pennsylvania, your Beef Council staff members have conducted interviews with key consumer media outlets throughout the state to reassure consumers of the safety and wholesomeness of American beef. Background information has also been distributed to leading retailers and foodservice outlets across the Commonwealth. Additionally, the office has fielded numerous consumer inquiries, and has sent information to leading food and health reporters. Our message has been simple: "Cattlemen have two responsibilities: one is to protect cattle from preventable diseases, and the other is to provide a safe and wholesome product for consumers. American cattlemen are accomplishing both."

The Beef Council has coordinated its efforts closely with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, who in turn, have been in contact with the Pennsylvania Department of Health, to ensure a consistent, positive response.

Current depressed cattle prices have created a sense of anxiety among many of us. Anticipated large fed cattle market levels, and a quickly approaching crucial summer grilling season have added to the concerns of British BSE issue may have on our local beef market. As a producer, like yourself, I share in your concerns but I take comfort in knowing that our Beef Council is working overtime to address the issue while at the same time laying plans for the most extensive summer beef promotion ever conducted within the state.

I provide this information to you with the intention of keeping you as a producer, and beef checkoff investor, informed. If you have further questions, please don't hesitate to contact myself, or the Beef Council office (717-545-6000).

Sincerely

Robert Gabel

protecting humans from deadly disease can identify unrecognizable varieties of the bacteria) and the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine and its New Bolton Center.

Without the formation of this system, the state's agricultural export industry will not be able to export much in a timely or cost-effective manner.

This is because disease and testing concerns are different for the different countries to which Pennsylvania products could be exported. If Pennsylvania has no certified testing system — which it didn't until receiving conditional approval last year — then testing must be done at certified laboratories in other states.

Having to deal with testing and approvals in distant laboratories, having to pay for the shipping of samples for testing, not being able to react quickly or get information about diseases here in a timely manner all combine to put the entire state agriculture industry at high risk.

It also puts the residents of Pennsylvania at high risk, because they live in close proximity to high densities of livestock.

Many livestock and wild animal diseases can be contracted by humans, such as rabies, tuberculosis, etc.

Without the constant testing done through the Animal Health Diagnostic System, without the current building mode of increasing the strength of diagnostic health services and without the achievement of extreme efficiencies that have been made, the state would not be enjoying its current situation of being on the threshhold of achieving a sound, economically fruitfull and health-assuring foundation for the state's agricultural business — its leading industry.

The Vet School is unique because of the range of services to food safety, to animal production technology and research, to companion animals, to human health research, and to nutrition and the environment.

There is work underway to study techniques in nutrition so as to reduce the amount of bypass nitrogen in manure.

Promising work is underway to determine how to feed animals best for production and to reduce the amount of nitrogen in their manure. If this can be done, there is less nitrogen of concern that could possibly get into streams and groundwater and the Chesapeake.

Dean Kelly explained that compared to other state veterinary schools, it is already saddening that the best in the nation is mostly unaffordable to its residents because of a lack of state support.

Other state vet schools receive about 66 percent of their total funding from the state. The University of Pennsylvania Vet School has seen a high of 35 percent, but mostly half of what other states spend to support their vet schools.

At the same time, the tuition at the Vet School is one of the highest. The national average tuition for in-state students attending a vet school is $6,485 (remember those states provides 66 percent of the school funding), whereas in-state student in Pennsylvania pay $19,168, and that is with a $1,100 scholarship grant.

The cost to out-of-state students to attend the Penn Vet School is $24,102, while the national average for out-of-state students to attend a vet school is $15,803.

According to Dean Kelly the governor's proposal could easily put the school out of business and that would be determintal to the rest of the state's economy.

The point is that Gov. Ridge's proposed $5.6 million reduction in state spending to support the Vet School is going to cause hundreds of millions more in lost income.

The school is primarily self-sufficient, it has the highest number of published research, its depends heavily on research grants to pay its staff and it already uses tuition and fees to the public to operate.

The University has no money to give it, Kelly said. If the budget cut stays, the Vet School will decline.

In closing remarks, Guy Donaldson urged those representatives present to educate their peers and to urge the governor to relook at the situation and how much harm he would be doing to the state if his proposed cut is sustained.

DelVal Has Active Block And Bridle Club

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — As the Centennial of Delaware Valley College continues on its Doylestown, Bucks County, campus, so does the activity of the College's Block and Bridle Club. Currently, our president is Shelly Chase, our vice president is Wendy Jesilowski, our secretary is Heather Kerr and our treasurer is Michael Hensel.

The club started the spring semester by participating in the 80th annual Pennsylvania Farm Show. Along with staffing an independent exhibit in the Animal Learning Center, Block and Bridle members were responsible for showing the beef cattle and sheep exhibited by the College. In addition, DelVal Ag Ambassadors and Block and Bridle members met with Governor Ridge as he visited the show on Wednesday, January 10.

The club assisted in sending fifteen members from all classes to represent the College at the National Cattlemen's Convention in San Antonio, Texas. While there our students learned new techniques at the Cattlemen's College and hunted for post-graduate positions at the Cattlemen's Trade Show.

Pennsylvania Agriculture secretary Charles Brosius and Governor Tom Ridge accept a Delaware Valley College centennial license plate from Ag Ambassadors Eric Stewart and Leslie Cline at this year's Pennsylvania Farm Show. In addition to meeting the Governor, DelVal Block and Bridle Club members worked to ensure a successful show for Delaware Valley College.

In mid-February the Block and Bridle Club co-hosted a career night with the College's National Agri-Marketing Association (NAMA) chapter, to assist DelVal seniors in search of agriculture-related positions. Recent ham and T-shirt sales allowed us to send 27 students to the Northeast Student Affiliate Conference at the University of Delaware. Three separate judging teams, two paper presentations, and three quiz bowl teams carried the DelVal flag. Heather Kerr, a large animal science major from Mechanicsburg, competed for outstanding senior honors.

We are currently working to select the 1996 Block and Bridle scholarship recipients and pick an outstanding member from each class. We are planning the annual B&B/Dairy Society banquet and a pig roast social event. We are also working closely with other students to assure the success of our Centennial year A-Day festival, to be held April 27 and 28 on the DelVal campus.

Since its founding as the National Farm School in 1896, Delaware Valley College has emphasized the importance of "Science with Practice" in education. The Block and Bridle Club, one of the oldest at the College, continues to remain in touch with this all important educational philosophy as we celebrate the importance of agriculture in Pennsylvania.

Penn State Dairy Expo Is April 20

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 1996 Penn State Dairy Exposition is to be held Saturday, April 20 at the Penn State Ag Arena in University Park.

The event is open to all dairy enthusiasts, according to the sponsoring organization, the Penn State Dairy Science Club.

New additions to the Expo are to be a children's petting zoo and an educational exhibit, commodity tailgate exhibits, and celebrity events featuring Penn State athletes.

In addition, more than 30 students are to participate in the exposition show, which provides students practical knowledge about fitting and displaying university dairy cattle.

The competition begins at 8 a.m., with special events beginning around 11 a.m.

"Dairy Expo provides people an opportunity to lean more about the dairy industry and agriculture," said Donald Harwood, chairman of this year's expo committee.

"We are making a special effort to reach out to consumers and students to provide them information about their food products. Everyone is invited to attend the Expo and the Blue-White football game at Beaver Stadium later in the afternoon."

An awards banquet is to be held at 6 p.m. at the State College Holiday Inn to honor show award winners. Tickets to the banquet are available by calling (814) 863-3664.

Holstein USA, National DHIA Team Up In Animal ID

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Two members of the dairy industry have agreed to work cooperatively on improving the dairy cattle identification system firmly in place. During a joint Board of Directors meeting, Holstein Association USA and the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association (NDHIA) strongly confirmed their support for the American ID Numbering System (American ID) that was developed by the Council on Dairy Cattle Breeding (CDCB) in 1995. The Council is comprised of National DHIA, National Association of Animal Breeders, Purebred Dairy Cattle Association, and the USDA/AIPL.

The goal of American ID is to provide a unique number for each animal identified by organizations that incorporate the numbering system. CDCB initiated the move to such a single identification numbering system in late 1995, approving American ID as a way to allow for unificationof the industry's identification system. The American ID number will consist of a country code and a unique 12-digit number. The Boards also unanimously supported the concept of a voluntary national ID program referred to as the National Farm Animal Identification and Records (National F.A.I.R.). National F.A.I.R. would expand American ID beyond parentage and performance recording organizations, to also include state veterinarians, herd health practicioners, and USDA agencies, among others.

Administration of ID records electronically from the farm to databases would insure higher accuracy of the data while maintaining efficiencies. Various ID methods, including electronic ID and bar coding technology that provide accurate ID for management purposes, would also be accomodated. A committee consisting of various industry organizations, including representatives from animal health and regulatory agencies will be appointed to developthe details for the National F.A.I.R. proposal with the objective of obtaining imput and gaining support across the farm animal industry.

Under the current system, dairy cattle can have several identification numbers assigned to them during their lifetime: calfhood vaccination (USDA uniform series ear tag) number, breed registration number, DHI number, and DRPC computer number, to name a few. The new system will provide one identification number for milk recording, breed associations, USDA and animal health practitioners, among others.

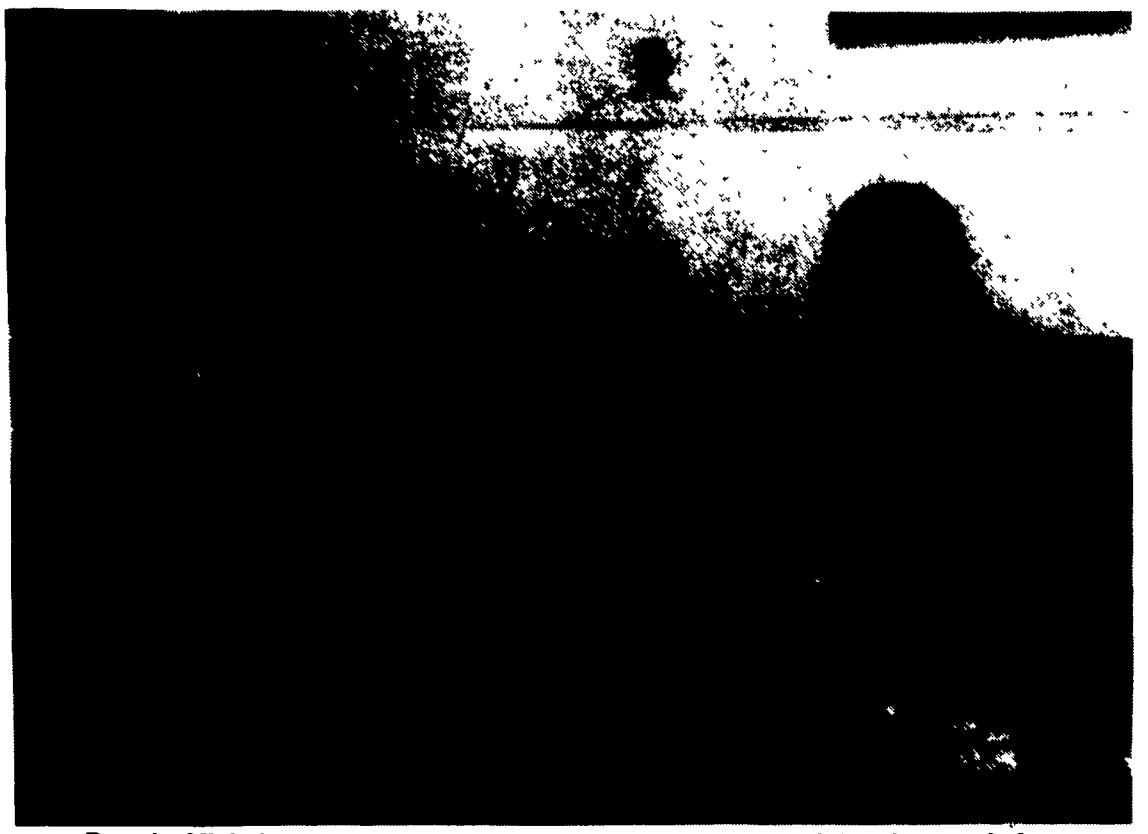
Garbers Grind Wheat Kernels To Make Bread

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EAST PETERSBURG (Lancaster Co.) — When Brenda Garber makes homemade bread, she grinds flour from whole kernel wheat. That might sound a bit old-fashioned, but Brenda's methods are far from outdated. She uses some of the newest machines available to homeowners.

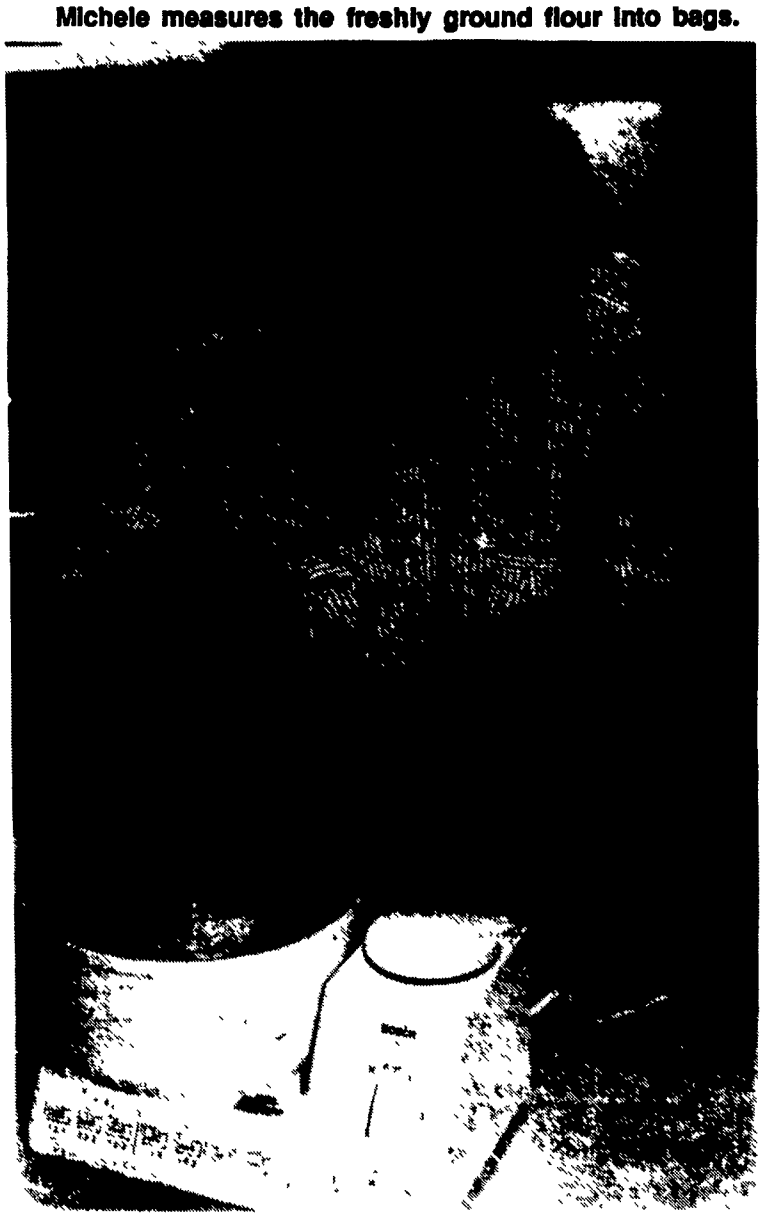
Within minutes she can change whole kernel wheat into the finest sifted flour by using a grain mill, which is about a two-foot high cannister-type container. The flour is then combined with other bread-making ingredients in a Bosch Universal Kitchen system that kneads six loaves of bread at one time. It takes two hours from start to finish to produce six loaves of bread.

While it is impressive to watch the whole kernel wheat transformed into flour within minutes, it may seem like an unnecessary step when flour is readily available at supermarkets.



Brenda, Michele and Richard are ready to eat the raisin bread that they made from start to finish in two hours.

Michele measures the freshly ground flour into bags.



This mixer kneads dough for six loaves of bread at one time. The dough is left in the bowl to raise and then formed into loaves and baked in the oven.

But, Brenda contends, that the flour that she grinds is not at all like that available on supermarket shelves. She has researched and experimented with many different types of flours. About five years ago, she became convinced that dietary benefits from midwestern wheat was much better than that of locally grown wheat and of that sold at supermarkets.

Although the same wheat can be sowed locally, the nutritional benefits are not as great because weather and soil conditions vary.

"Montana wheat has twice the amount of gluten as wheat grown in this area," Brenda said.

Gluten is the elastic protein substance that gives cohesiveness to dough. Otherwise, bread is solid and firm. Most Americans — the Garbers included — prefer fluffier, softer bread.

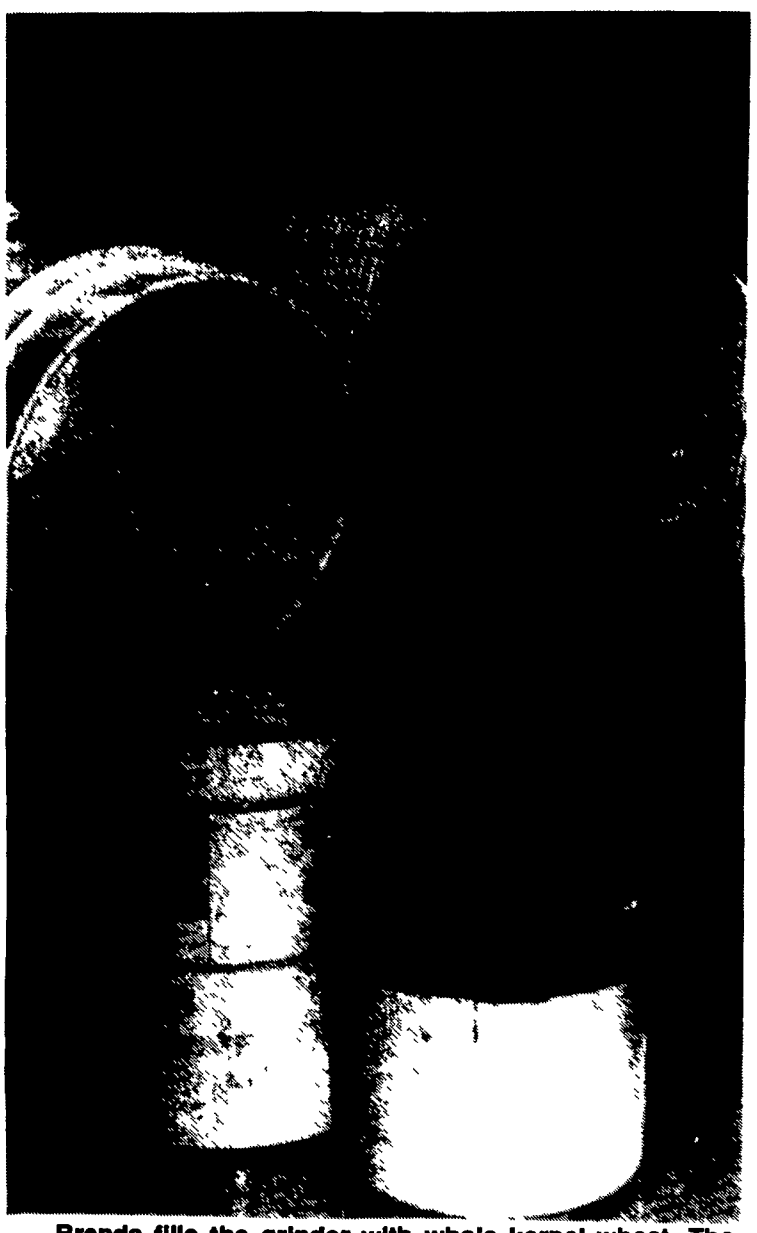
For this reason, many recipes for whole wheat bread actually use only one-half whole wheat flour and the other half white flour.

But the wheat that Brenda grinds can be used entirely as the flour in bread recipes. It has enough gluten to give it the desired lightness. This means that all the whole kernel nutrients remain in the freshly ground flour.

Because white flour is derived from only the inner part of the wheat kernel, it loses most of the nutrients that whole wheat contains. Generally, white flour is enriched, but only about one-third of the nutrients are put back into the flour.

Also removed during the refining process is the bran, which is needed to provide fiber in diets. Many studies confirm that most American diets are lacking in fiber. It is believed that fiber helps to prevent cancer and many other diseases.

According to Brenda, freshly ground whole wheat contains so many nutrients that a person could exist almost entirely on bread and water if needed. She said that the biblical references to "daily bread" confirms that bread was made to sustain the human body.



Brenda fills the grinder with whole kernel wheat. The Grain Master grinds the wheat into fine flour within minutes.

Brenda also uses freshly ground whole wheat flour in cookies and cake recipes.

Because the kitchen mill grinds the flour as fine as baby powder, the whole wheat texture in cakes and cookies is not as offensive as it is in most store-bought whole wheat flour, Brenda explained.

It is no easy feat for Brenda to obtain the Montana wheat. Five years ago, she was told she needed to order a minimum of one ton. Dismayed, she put the idea on hold. She was assured by the Montana plant that she could easily distribute that amount among acquaintances because once people use it, they become firm customers.

Four years ago, Brenda placed an order for one ton of the flour.

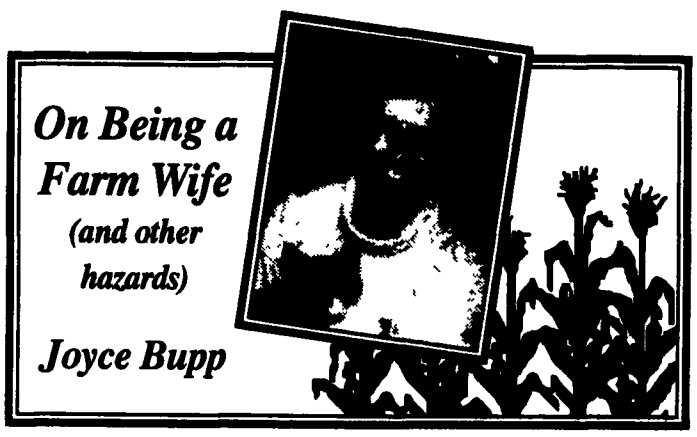
HOMESTEAD NOTES



Just call this Maple Syrup — Part II.

Perhaps you remember our recent maple syrup-making experiment.

While removing invasive young trees from along the edges of some fields, The Farmer discovered sap pouring out from the stumps of several small maples he had downed. Intrigued by the abundant flow of sap, he carted several plastic containers to the site and gathered a few gallons of the clear, slightly-greenish-tinted liquid.

When they ended up on the kitchen counter, it was obvious that the kitchen was going to become a temporary sugaring house. So we boiled for several hours, refrigerated the condensed stuff overnight, started a second kettle in the morning and boiled some more.

Eventually the couple of gallons was reduced to a pint of still-thin syrup that had a least transformed to a warm, brownish color. In the house for lunch, The Farmer eyed the remnants of his gathering and suggested we halt the process before reducing the yield to a mere few tablespoons.

So into the refrigerator went a two-cup container of sweet, brownish, very runny, sort of Maple Syrup Lite.

Since then, we've been fascinated to learn how many other amateur syrup concocters there are out there. One friend related how she and her husband gathered 50 gallons of sap in the mountains and cooked it down over a fire kept roaring under a large, metal cooker once used by the local fire company for frying doughnuts.

A reader shares how he taps maple trees in his yard and also cooks the sap down on an outside fire. Boiling down maple syrup in the house, he relates, "is a good way to take off wallpaper."

We didn't remove any wallpaper — most of our walls are paneled to cover up the old, crumbling, horsehair plaster — but did enjoy extra high humidity from the steam generated during the process. But keep that thought in mind should you need to remove wallpaper from your house at some point in time.

And to neighbor John, who left a message on the phone machine asking if he could bring over a pancake to sample the syrup, my apologies. You're too late.

See, several days after our sugaring event, I had to be away for a meeting. While The Farmer had been sampling the syrup as a spread on bread, he decided maybe he could thicken it up a bit.

So, he emptied the syrup into my favorite one-quart, stainless steel saucepan — a wedding gift, so you know how long I've used it — and returned it to the stove. He did this at lunchtime, then remembered he needed to run out "a minute" to do something at the barn.

Right. The minute stretched into many. And he returned to a house filled with smoke, no maple syrup, and a blackened pan. In fact, the pan had gotten so hot that the inner layer of aluminum had melted out into a thick puddle on the stove. (He confessed — and gave me permission to tell this tale — before I discovered my favorite saucepan missing.)

No, I did not "fly off the handle." What I did was offer a prayer of thanks that all that was destroyed was a pan — and not the house. And made him promise to NEVER leave the house with the stove turned on. Even for a minute.

I am now the owner of an original aluminum-sculpted paperweight. If you use your imagination, it looks like a reclining elephant with its trunk raised up in the air.

The paperweight will sit on a windowsill next to another "souvenir" — a part removed a couple of years ago from the pick-up truck's gas tank. Wiring problems had started a fire that got so hot that the plastic on this piece — from inside the gas tank — is partially melted. But it never exploded.

I look at it now and then. And count our blessings.

Garbers Grind Wheat

Her fears of what she would do with so much flour were groundless. Now she orders four tons three times a year, which she sells by word of mouth.

Because Brenda, her husband Glenn and children, Michele, 15, and Richard, 12, live in a suburb, they rent storage facilities elsewhere. Brenda said that she started teaching bread making from freshly milled flour one by one to others. The idea caught on, and Brenda received more and more requests for the demonstration. Now she offers demonstrations to groups, either in her own home or in the home located within a one-hour drive of Lancaster City. She charges $10 a person, but serves lunch made of wheat chili, freshly baked bread, and even wheat roasted coffee. Each participant also goes home with a loaf of bread.

Although Brenda will sell freshly ground flour to those who attend her classes, she limits the amount. "I am not in the business of grinding flour for people," she said.

She prefers to teach others how to do it and have them order the equipment and grind the wheat themselves. She sells 50 pounds of whole kernel wheat for $16.

Bosch, she said, is a Germany company that is well known for making quality auto parts and tools. Brenda checked out other brands but believes the Bosch brand is outstanding for its whisper quiet motor, speed, and ease to operate and clean.

Although the initial outlay for the equipment may seem high, Brenda said, "It's an investment, but you get your money back."

She estimates that it costs her only 40 cents a loaf to make the bread. In addition the kitchen system serves as an electric mixer, blender, and food processor.

All types of hard grains can be ground in the mill.

For more information on bread making classes or the whole kernel wheat, contact Brenda at (717) 569-0158.

Storing Homegrown Herbs

This is the fourth article in a series on growing herbs. Gardeners find growing fresh herbs a rite of spring.

Do your parsley flakes turn faded and flat tasting? What's the best way to store herbs? Culinary herbs can be eaten fresh, dried or frozen for later use. Stalks of basil, parsley, rosemary, thyme, mints, sage and others can be collected early in the morning just after the dew has dried on the foliage. It is at this time of day when their essential oils are at their peak. Rinse the herbs to remove any dust or dirt and pat dry with paper towels.

Store the herbs in glass containers with airtight lids in a coll, dry location. Keep them out of direct sunlight preferably in the dark. Store them at 70°F or less.

The shelf life of herbs vary. For whole leaves and flowers, store for one year only. Ground-up herbs last six months.

For long term storage, freezing is a quick method of storing herbs for cooked dishes. Your harvested herbs can be chopped or packaged whole in small plastic bags, labeled and placed directly into the freezer. Another freezer method is herb cubes. Place chopped herbs in an ice cube tray. Fill with water and freeze. When frozen they can be popped out and tossed into soups, casseroles, and stews.

Place harvested herbs on drying racks made of screens or cheesecloths trays. Small bundles of herbs can be tied and hung in a dry, well-ventilated room away from direct sunlight. Sunlight will break down the essential oils and reduce flavor quality.

Excessive moisture also causes reduced flavor. Eventually herbs will turn moldy. Your herbs will be dry enough to store when teh foliage crumbles in your hand. Check for condensation inside the jars. This is a sign that the herbs were not completely dry and should be removed and dried more thoroughly. For the best quality store the leaves whole and crush just before using.

You can also experiment with oven and microwave drying. In a conventional oven herbs can be spread on oven racks or cookie sheets and dried at 120°F until they crumble in your hand. The amount of time for drying will depend on the type and quantity of herbs being dried. Herbs being dried in the microwave can be placed in between several sheets of paper towel and dried at a medium power for 2-3 minutes at a time until crumbly.

Finally handle herbs with care. Always use clean dry utensils when handling herbs.

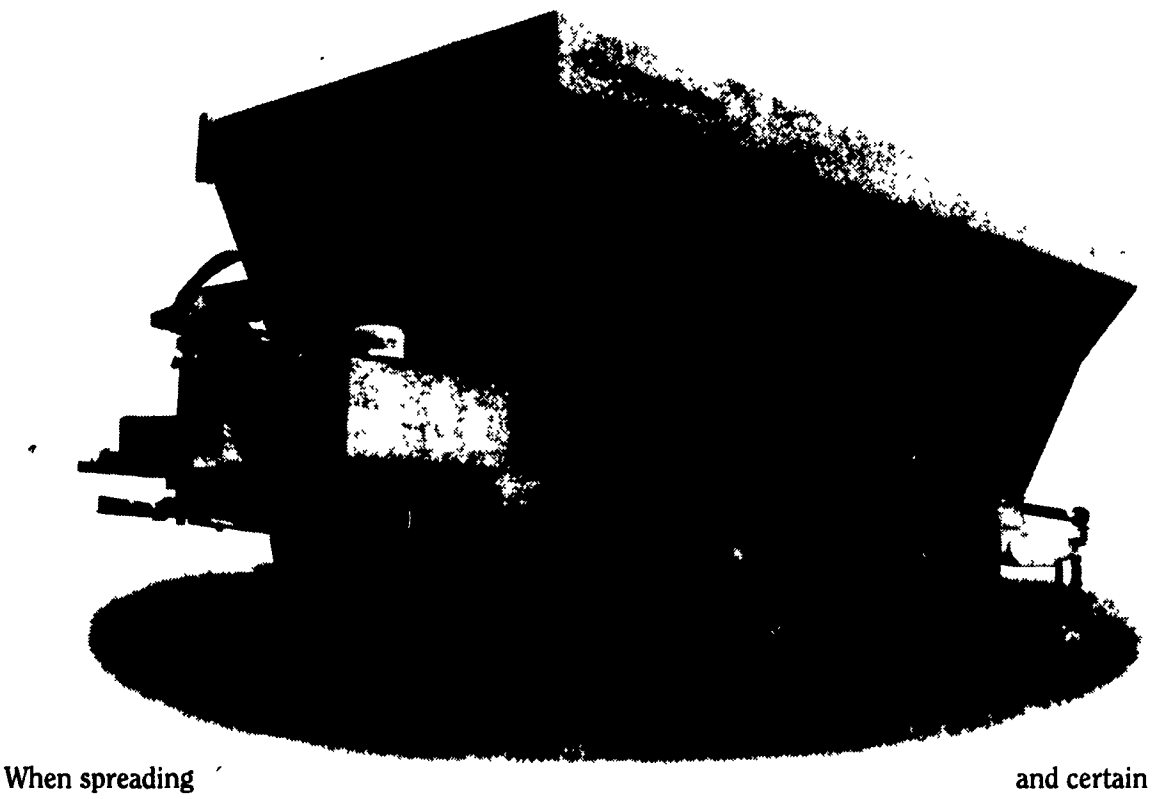
Sometimes You Need A Spreader Built Like A Tank.



When spreading stockpiled lime, for example. The Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreader is likely the most powerful spreader of its kind on the market today. You see, we've been building them since 1945, and farmers are still using Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreaders they've had for 20, even 30 years. Our special drag chain is 4 times stronger than stainless steel, and handles frozen and heavy stockpiled lime with ease. Plus, for spreading compost, composted sludge, poultry litter and certain fertilizers, the WLS is without equal for sheer volume spreading. We call that performance. You'll call it terrific.

We hope you compare a Stoltzfus WLS with other spreaders. It makes us look even better. Price? Sure we may be a little more. But when you end up replacing cheaper units in a few short years, what have you saved? Stoltzfus quality always pays foritself many times over.

Just how tough is a Stoltzfus WLS? Plenty tough. Call today. We'll tell you where to find the dealer nearest you, and send you free literature to inspect.

Graham Crackers Provide More Than A Snack

Graham crackers and milk has long been a staple snack in families with children. Let's face it, its a snack that people of all ages continue to love.

But graham crackers are no longer relegated to snack time. It's amazing the fantastic dishes derived from the cracker that was named after Sylvester Graham (1794-1851), an American food reformer who advocated the use of coarsely ground whole-wheat flour from which graham is made.

Graham recipes from our readers include many old favorites and some new ones you're sure to love.

Whether you call them nuggets or morsels or bites or chunks, you will find that small pieces of breaded chicken are one of the all-time favorite foods for kids. They like the fact that they are easy to bite and love to dip them in sauce.

Children can help you make these treats. According to Penn State Extension, now is the time to introduce them to safe food handling when working with raw meat and poultry. Be sure to wash your hands before you start and as soon as you have finished breading the chicken chunks with crumbs. Work on a tray or waxed paper covered surface and talk about the importance of washing the work space with soapy water after handling raw foods as you are doing it.

CHICKEN CHUNKS

1 pound chicken breast, boned and skinned, cut into 1½-inch chunks
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
½ cup Italian-seasoned bread crumbs

Place the mayonnaise in a medium bowl. Add the chicken pieces and stir to coat. Put the crumbs into another bowl or plate. Coat the chicken with crumbs. Arrange on a lightly greased baking sheet. Bake 425 degrees for about 10 minutes or until brown and cooked through. Dip into mild salsa or meatless spaghetti sauce or salad dressing.

ANSWER — Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, wanted a recipe for mayonnaise cake. Thanks to Brenda Sivelluiss, Chambersburg; Anna Martin, Denver; Geraldine Moyer, Pen Argyl; Ruby Kistle, New Tripoli, and others for sending recips.

Mayonnaise Cake

Sift together:
- 2 cups cake flour
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup cocoa
- 2 teaspoons baking soda

Add:
- 1 cup cold water
- 1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat 2 minutes. Bake at 350 for 30 to 35 minutes.

ANSWER — Mrs. Geri Schmidt, Bedminster, wanted a recipe for homemade flat thin pancakes, possibly called French pancakes. Thanks to C. Denlinger, Gordonville, for sending several recipes. French pancakes are commonly called crepes.

Filled French Pancakes

- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs
- 1½ cups flour
- ¼ cup water
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons melted butter
- 4 tablespoons vegetable oil

Combine eggs, milk, water, flour, salt, and 3 tablespoons melted butter in blender. Blend at high speed for a few seconds. Scrape sides and blend more. You may use electric mixer and bowl, but be sure mixture is free of lumps. Heat crepe pan or small skillet. Test with drop of water. When hot enough to evaporate water instantly, lightly brush bottom and sides of skillet with grease, using pastry brush. Carefully spoon in two tablespoons batter. Tip pan to quickly spread. Pour off any excess batter. The crepe should cook immediately. When rim turns brown, turn and cook other side. Remove to plate. Brush skillet with grease again and continue with batter until it is all used. You may thin batter if it comes too thick. Place wax paper between crepes. They may be frozen for latter use.

Basic Crepe Recipe

- 2 eggs
- 1¼ cups milk
- 1 cup plain flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons melted butter or vegetable oil

Beat together eggs and milk with a whisk or blender. Sift the flour with the salt and add to the egg and milk mixture. Add the melted butter or vegetable oil and blend thoroughly. If beating by hand, stain the mixture through a sieve to remove any lumps. Allow the mixture to stand for at least an hour before using. If the batter is too thick, add a little milk and mix. Pour one or two tablespoons of the batter into center of a hot, lightly oiled frypan. Tilt to spread the batter to the edges of the pan. Cook until the top is dry. Turn over and cook the other side for about 15 seconds. Makes 12 crepes.

French Crepe Batter

- 3 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- ⅓ cup water
- 1¼ cups plain flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2½ tablespoons melted butter

Beat the eggs and add to the milk and water. Sift the flour with the salt and gradually add to the egg and milk mixture. Add the melted butter and blend thoroughly. If mixing by hand, strain the batter through a sieve to remove any lumps. Allow to stand for at least an hour before using. If too thick, add a little more water and mix well. Pour one to two tablespoons of the batter (depending on the size of the pan) into the center of a hot, lightly oiled frypan. Tip the pan to spread the batter and cook until the top is dry. Turn over and cook for 15 seconds on the other side. Makes 12 crepes.

ANSWER — Andrienne Huffner, New Germanton, found a handwritten recipe for French Cake inside an old cookbook. The recipe intriques her but it doesn't list flour as an ingredient, instructions or a temperature for baking it. She wanted to know if any one had information on this cake. Thanks to a reader who sent the following information taken from the Mennonite Cookbook. ". . . grandmother took for granted that any cook would know how to proceed without directions. She listed only the ingredients required without ever stating the procedure to follow . . . . A characteristic regarding the earliest cake recipes is that many even failed to list flour among the essential ingredients. Again it must have been assumed that anyone would know to add enough flour to make a batter 'just the right consistency.'"

ANSWER — Jan Novak, Center Valley, wanted a recipe for watermelon cake. Thanks to Janella Landis, Lancaster, for sending one for a cold dessert made of sherbert and formed in the shape of a watermelon. Also, Nellie Shank, McAlisterville, writes that watermelon cake can be made from any white cake recipe. Put about one-inch white batter around the outside of two 9-inch round pans. To the batter left, add red food coloring to make a pink batter, Add ½ cup raisin, which have been plumped. Pour batter into center of pans. Bake according to package directions. Frost outside of cake with green-colored icing.

Watermelon Bombe

- 1 pint lime sherbert
- 1 pint pineapple or pina colada sherbert
- 1 pint strawberry or red raspberry sherbert
- ¼ cup semi-sweet or milk chocolate chips

Line a bowl with foil. Drizzle chocolate syrup over the foil. Line foil with lime sherbert. Freeze. Line lime sherbert sherbert with next flavor and refreeze. Add the red sherbert and press chocolate chips into the sherbert for the "seeds." Freeze for 8 hours. Invert bowl and peel off foil. Cut bombe into slices that can be served as an appetizer or a refreshing dessert.

OWNER'S REPORT #56

"With our old bottom unloader, there was no telling what was coming out of the silo. But now with the B.U.C.S. big discharge capacity, we know we are going to get what we want, and as much of it as we want. We're happy with the way our Big Jim B.U.C.S. is working."

Maple Sugar Season Is Addictive, Says Matt

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOUTHAMPTON TWP. (Somerset Co.) — Matt Emerick is 13 years old and in grade eight at the Meyersdale High School. He's been helping his dad and mom — Ed and Wilma Emerick — make maple syrup ever since he was a small kid around age seven.

That's when he was old enough to help them hand the metal keelers (buckets) on the trees to catch sugar water.

Ever since then, Matt has been crazy about making maple syrup. And every year in late winter or spring, when it's time to tap the maple trees, Matt is eager to get started.

To "tap" a tree means a little hole is drilled into the trunk and a spile (small spigot) is hammered into the hole.

Next, a covered keeler is hung where sap can drip into it from the spile. It drips fast when the tree gets warm during the day, especially after a very, very cold night.

The water has sweetness or sugar in it. After it is boiled a few hours the water evaporates into steam and the sugar part becomes maple syrup. It is a pure and natural product because nothing else is added to it.

The Emericks make thousands of taps in big trees. They also attach a plastic tubing line to the taps besides using keelers. The water, or sap, is collected into huge tanks and hauled, by truck, to the sugar camp.

A sugar camp is the building where the boiling and filtering takes place. It's also where maple syrup is canned in jugs to sell to other people.

To "boil down" you need a roaring fire to heat the long silver evaporation pan. The Emericks use oil to fuel the fire. Many maple producers use wood fires.

"I know some kids would find it boring," Matt said, "but I enjoy it a lot. It's addictive," he added.

Six years of experience has made Matt skillful in the sugar camp. Now his dad knows Matt can do important tasks without help. For instance, in the last few weeks, Matt has boiled thousands of gallons of water by himself. That's a big responsibility.

Matt doesn't mind staying inside to track the progress of the syrup. He uses a device called a "hydrometer" to measure the "density."

While the water bubbles and evaportes, he reads books and newspapers and listens to the radio, because the syrup could be ruined if it was boiled too long. So he sits and watches and waits patiently.

Even when he goes to school, Matt is thinking about sugar making. He takes orders for maple candy and maple creams from hungry high school kids. Some of Matt's best customers are at school.

It's amazing that he can keep his grades up, but he sure does. All "A's" and "B's" on his report card, even during the maple season when it's hard for him to think of anything else.

Recently, the Emerick family (Matt's an only child), went to the center of the city of Philadelphia for Maple Syrup Days. Every year they go to give a sugar making demonstration to city folks.

Matt loves meeting all the people and telling them about the maple industry — just like they were old friends.

He made spotza for them by heating maple syrup to 240 degrees and pouring a little of it over ice in a Dixie cup. To eat it from their paper cup, each person used a wooden stick like the kind found in popsicles.

Spotza can be made with snow, too. That's probably how it was first done when spotza was made in earlier days.

Crumb sugar is another maple product that Matt knows how to make. Maple syrup is poured into a wooden trough that stands on legs. It is stirred and stirred until it turns to sugar granules. Usually, this takes about 15 minutes.

Crumb sugar is used for sweetening food and in baking.

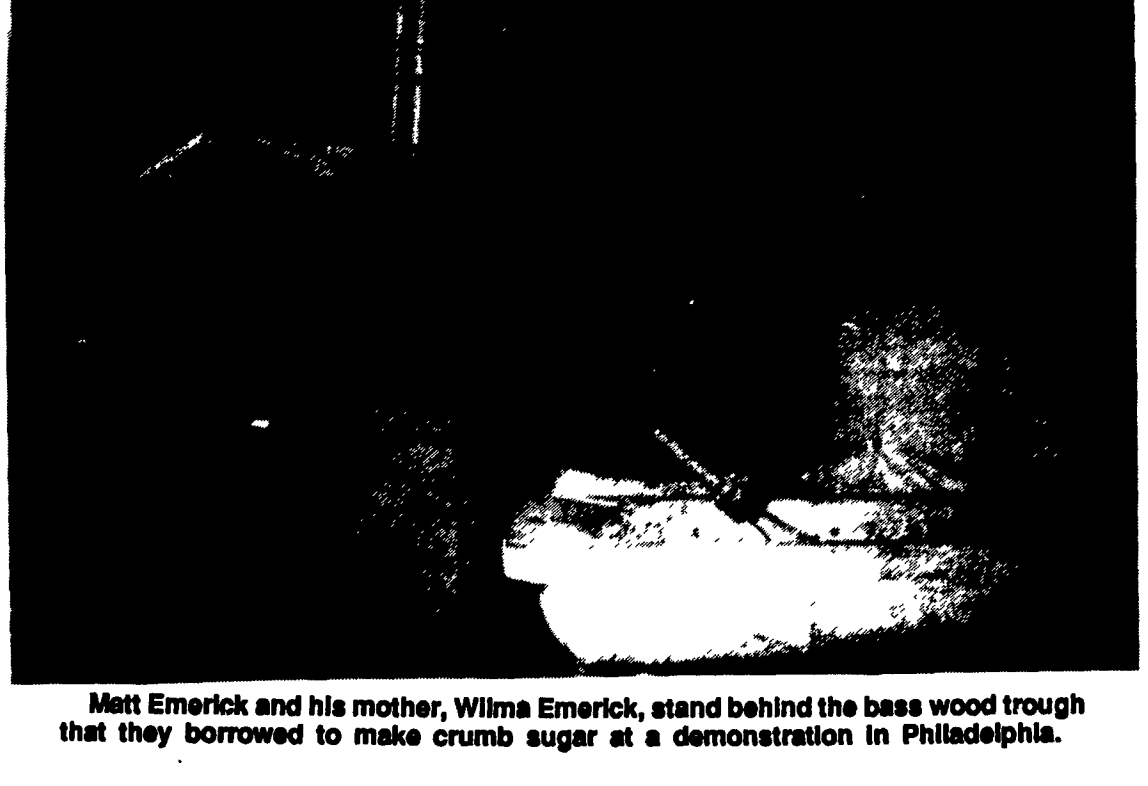
"I have maple at least once every week," Matt says, adding that he doesn't eat so much of it that he gets sick.

He thinks that pancakes topped with maple syrup is a dandy breakfast to eat on a lazy Saturday morning.

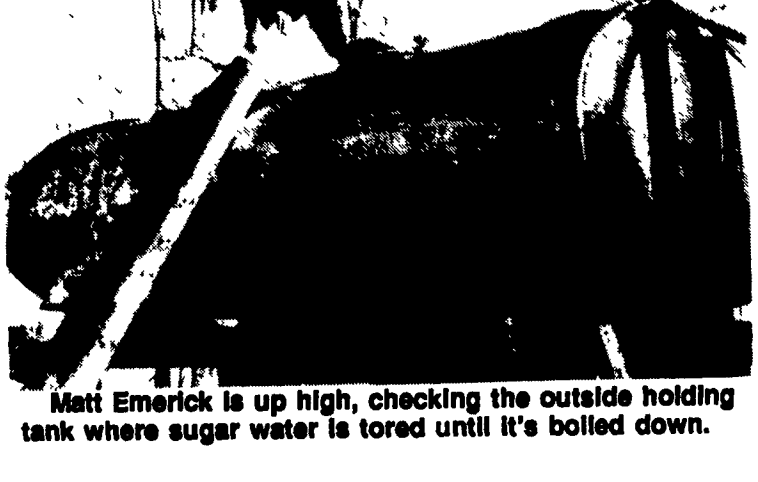
Matt Emerick uses a tapper to tap a maple tree. He says this step is first in making maple syrup.

Time to fill the jugs with wholesome and pure maple syrup. Matt Emerick says this is the final step.

Step Four is pouring sap into a gathering bucket. Matt Emerick's dad, Ed Emerick, is at the left.



Matt Emerick and his mother, Wilma Emerick, stand behind the bass wood trough that they borrowed to make crumb sugar at a demonstration in Philadelphia.



Matt Emerick is up high, checking the outside holding tank where sugar water is tored until it's boiled down.

Selecting Quality Child Care

Have you ever spent $2000 for an item in your home? If you did you probably spent a lot of time and effort to make sure you get the best buy for your money.

Yet, studies show that men and women treat selecting child care in such a quick manner that they take the first available spot for their most prized possession — their child.

Why do parents need to select child care so carefully? The child may be with that caregiver 8 to 10 hours a day. They are really substitute parents. The caregiver has a strong influence on a child during that period of time. Your child's well being and happiness are at stake.

A parent needs to approach selecting child care in the same manner as you would when buying a car or expensive appliance. Be a good consumer, shop around, compare quality and disadvantages of each child care arrangement.

It is absolutely necessary for you to visit the day care home or center and talk with the caregiver. You need to determine what the caregiver is like. Some questions to ask are:

- How did you get started as a family day caregiver?
- How long have you been doing it?
- Are you registered with the state?
- How many children do you care for each day? What are their ages?
- What type of things do you like to do with children?
- What sort of activities would my child take part in?
- How do you care for sick children?
- In addition, you should discuss such subjects as discipline and how arguments among children are handled. If the child is older, you should discuss what language is permitted by the caregiver and how she would handle inquiries by the child about some aspect of sex or religion.

During your visit you observe the caregiver with the other children and quite possibly your own if you initiate an invitation to have your child join the group for a short time while you look around. It is important that you see all the rooms and play areas, both inside and outside, that the children use. Use common sense. For example, if the house is near a busy road or creek, what amount of danger is present and what precautions are taken to safeguard the children. Most of all, how do you, the child's parent, honestly think and feel your child would fit into this family day care home or center?

If you decide on a specific family day care home or center, then make clear the arrangements — not only the payment but especially the services you expect and what responsibilities both you and the caregiver will be expected to carry out.

A written agreement is a far better arrangment than a verbal one. The following is a sample of the items you may wish to include.

Caregiver Service

1. Meals and snacks to be given.
2. Specific indoor and outdoor activities to be encouraged.
3. Toys, games, play equipment, and rooms available to your child.
4. Infant equipment and furniture to be supplied (crib, high chair, playpen, and so forth).

Your Responsibilities

1. Times for arrival and pickup.
2. Items to be brought from home (food, toys, change of diapers, change of clothes, toothbrush, infant furniture, and so forth).
3. Instructions for giving medicines or special food.
4. Telephone numbers: home, work, spouse's work, doctor, neighbor.
5. List of names and phone numbers of people who may pick up your child from the caregiver.

Specific Policies

1. Use of other adults to help out.
2. Use of other caregivers for emergencies, holidays, and vacations.
3. Care for children when they are sick.
4. Taking trips (need for permission or advance notice).
5. Advance written permission from you to obtain emergency treatment for your child, plus health insurance policy number, and agreement to call you in advance if possible.
6. How and when your child goes to school.
7. Whether your child may play with friends after school and amount of supervision needed.
8. Amount of notice and pay needed to end the arrangement.

Terms of Payment

1. Amount to be paid.
2. When payment is due.
3. Whether paid by cash or check.
4. Whether there are any other fees or expenses.
5. Whether you will be charged for days when your child is not in care due to illness, holiday, or emergency.
6. Payment for providing care at unusual hours or days.

Ag Days Celebrated At Carrolltown Mall

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

ELDERSBURG, Md. — For the ninth consecutive year, farm groups from Carroll County took over Carrolltown mall for Ag Days. This year's theme was "Carroll County Agriculture — Growing Better Everyday From Generation To Generation." The two-day program is a cooperative venture involving agribusiness and farm organizations from the county, the Maryland State Grange, the Carroll County Cooperative Extension Service, and Carrolltown Mall.

Geared toward the non-farming public, the annual festival features hands-on activities and educational exhibits thoughtfully designed to encourage the general public's understanding of how important agriculture is in their lives. The program provides an opportunity for farm groups to showcase the county's biggest industry in a fun, friendly environment.

Dance performances by the Four County Squares dance group and the Carroll County Cloggers kicked off the festivities on Friday night. Saturday's agenda included a fashion show organized by Fashion Trends 4-H Club, a 4-H Kids On The Block puppet show, the Carroll County 4-H Food and Nutrition Bowl Exhibition, and a children's pedal tractor pull. Highlights also included a farm animal petting zoo, a children's coloring contest, and a Homemade Ice Cream Churnoff contest.

One display offered passersby an opportunity to see and pet champion rabbits exhibited by the Carroll County 4-H Rabbit Club. Jen Wade, a club member who has raised 10 national level grand champions, brought a standard-sized doe which took Best in Show honors at the County Fair, and Best of Breed at the State Fair.

Lawrence Meeks was at Ag Days representing the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board (MGPUB), which collects and invests grain checkoff money in education, promotion, and research. "We're here to teach people about grain products," Meeks said, "and also to educate about the checkoff." He said he had entertained questions from the public ranging from, "Why is the price of bread so high?" to "Why didn't my sweet corn come up last year?"

More than 30 booths were set up by organizations and businesses to answer questions and distribute information. In addition to the displays, there were also crowd pleasing contests, demonstrations, and children's activities.

Winners of the coloring contest included the following: 3-5 year old category, Alyssa Hale of Millers; 6-9 year old category: Ashley Hale of Millers; and 10-12 year old category: Tammmy Thomas of Sykesville. Honorable mentions went to Sabra Bushey of Sykesville and Heather Schmidt of Westminster. Judging the coloring contest was Christine Bell, a seventh grader at New Windsor Middle School.

A Pedal Pull was sponsored by Central Maryland Antique Tractor Club, with Wayne T. Shankle of Jefferson as Master of Ceremonies. Toy tractor prizes awarded for the Pedal Pull were donated by Taneytown Southern States, EZ DUZ IT Super Stock Puller, Reifsnider Vet and Farm Supplies, Finch Services, Jeff Hevner Tractor Repair, Taneytown Auto Parts, Westminster Southern States, Wilkim Holsteins, and Rasche Brothers.

Pedal Pull winners included: 5-6 year olds: 1. Samantha Williams, 2. Bryanna Walls, 3. Justin Kelly; 7-8 year olds: 1. Taylor Barnes, 2. Brian Rasche, 3. Evan Staley; 9-10 year olds: 1. Steven Cox, 2. Chris Green, 3. Nicolette Null.

In the Ice Cream Churnoff, first place went to the Carroll County 4-H Dairy Club Girls team for their peach ice cream. Team members included Jessica Fritz, Kelly Myers, Kristen Myers, and Maryland Dairy Princess Christina Harper. Taking second place was the Carroll County Pomona Grange entry, "Sure-Good" Strawberry ice cream. Members were John Koller, Henry Koller, Marlene Koller, Cliff Newsome, Mary-Lou Pletcher, and Blair Pletcher. Coming in third were the Carroll County 4-H Dairy Club Boys with their Blackberry ice cream. Team members were Gary Brauning III, Jeff Sutton, Justin Watt, and Zack Hall.

Judges for the Ice Cream Churnoff were Laura Kaminski, field services representative for Maryland Farm Bureau; Scott Rankin, assistant professor and dairy processing extension specialists at the University of Maryland, and Karen Butler, Lancaster Farming Correspondent.

Jen Wade, an 8-year member of the Carroll County 4-H Rabbit Club, holds her Best of Breed Standard — sized Rex Junior Doe. Standing with Jen is Club member Jessie DeLuca.

Meals In Minutes

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — "Good cooking has to take time," said Fay Strickler, Berks County extension home economist. A broad smile spread across her face as she added a resounding, "Not!"

With the help of nutrition advisers Alice Torres and Carol Fisher, Fay led a recent workshop called "Meals in Minutes," which demonstrated that delicious meals can truly be made in minutes.

The secret lies mostly in selecting the right recipes and in planning.

Fay explained that a pot roast can't be made in minutes, but doubling the amount, freezing, and reheating results in a quick meal later on.

The demonstration team also pointed out that what one person considers time saving another person may not. Some people like using pressure cookers, some like buying in large quantities and dividing into smaller portions, some precook foods, and others prefer to open cans and dump.

The workshop was packed with both verbal and written information for spending less time in the kitchen and devising better meals.

Planning

Planning includes a lot of common sense ideas. These include:

• The night before — place frozen meat in the refrigerator to thaw. Check to make certain you have all the ingredients to make the dish.

• As you start cooking, preheat the broiler or oven, reread the recipe, and gather all ingredients and utensils needed.

• During cooking, try to do two things at once; for example, while water is boiling for pasta, open cans or chop vegetables.

• Hurry up the heating process by choosing wide-diameter saucepans.

• To boil water, start with hot tap water.

• Use work- and time-saving ingredients and gadgets whenever possible.

• Cut down on clean up by reusing measuring cups and spoons. Measure dry ingredients before wet ones.

• Have the whole family pitch in. Divide the meal into parts and give each member something to prepare.

• Bake or chill the dessert while you're eating.

Time-Saving Hints

• Meal planning: save time, money, and unnecessary trips to the store by planning a two to four-week cycle of menus. Once planned, you can recycle the menus. Include cookbook names and recipe pages and numbers on menu listing.

• Use the refrigerator for a handy spot to post a running grocery list. Encourage family members to add their ideas.

• Prepare ahead: cut, wash, and store lettuce and other salad ingredients. Place in resealable plastic bags so you can quickly toss together,

• Wash, dry, and slice fresh turkey and chicken into strips. Place in freezer bag and freeze.

• Chop large quantities of seasonal vegetables such as onions, green peppers, and celery, and freeze in half-cup bags or tray freeze.

• Fresh tomato salad: use low or nonfat Italian bottled salad dressing for tomatoes. Add chopped fresh or frozen basil and let stand to warm 30 minutes to absorb flavor. Add lemon or lime juice and other seasonings.

• Stew large amounts of chicken pieces, then debone and bag them in serving sizes.

• Fruit sauce for ice cream, fruit, or angel food cake — heat to soften one jar of red currant seedless jelly, add water to thin and a dash of lemon. Use as a sauce for fresh fruit.

• Wash and dry fresh herbs. Chop and seal in ziplock freezer bags (squeeze out all air). Stack on door shelf of freezer.

• Enhance commercial bottled salsa: add fresh pepper, celery, cilantro, parsley, and lime juice.

• Add flavor to vegetables: freeze broth, soups, tomato paste and sauce, and gravies in ice cube trays. Add as needed to saute vegetables.

Fay Strickler, Alice Torres, and Carol Fisher demonstrate quick and easy meals made in minutes.

A herb vegetable bake is made by alternating zucchini, tomatoes, potatoes, and cloves brushed with olive oil and arranged in a 12-inch circular casserole dish. Sprinkle with thin garlic slices and chopped basil leaves. Bake for 30 to 40 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Make Your Own One-Dish Meals

Don't buy packaged one-dish meals. You can save lots of money by making your own. A list of items to stock in your pantry and menu ideas results in a multitude of choices for spur-of-the-minute meals.

You can create hundreds of different casseroles by mixing and matching the foods from the following list. Choose one food under each heading. Cook pasta according to package directions, and drain. Add vegetables, sauce, and meat to the pasta. Stir lightly. Season to taste with salt, pepper, and spices of your choice. Continue to heat slowly or place in a greased casserole dish. Sprinkle with topping of your choice. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or simmer for 20 minutes.

The free handouts include ideas, lists, and recipes. Look in your phone directory for the number of the Penn State Cooperative Extension office nearest you.

Here are a few recipes.

CANNED CREAM SOUP OR CASSEROLE SOUP MIX

(Use this instead of cream soups in casserole recipes. It has about one-third the calories).

2 cups nonfat dry milk powder
¾ cup cornstarch
¼ cup instant reduced sodium chicken or beef bouillon
½ teaspoon dried crushed thyme
½ teaspoon dried crushed basil
¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine all ingredients using blender or food processor. Store in airtight container. To prepare as substitute for one can of condensed cream soup in recipes, stir together ⅓ cup dry mix and 1¼ cups water in saucepan. Cook and stir until thickened.

(Turn to Page B15)

Rice and beans make a company meal when garnished with a tomato flower and strips of pepper.

This attractive cake can be made in minutes. Thaw a frozen pound cake, cut in three layers. Soften lime sherbet and spread on the bottom layer. Spread soften tropical sherbet and thinly sliced strawberries on the middle layer. Top with whipped cream topping garnished with kiwi fruit and a strawberry fan. The fan is made by keeping on the cap of the strawberry and slicing the berry lengthwise into eight thin slices and spreading apart as a fan.

Farm Women Societies

Lebanon Society 21

Lebanon Farm Women Group #21 met on February 24 at the home of Lorraine Shuey. The evening was a "Sweetheart" dinner with Lorraine Shuey and Janet Blatt as hostess. Each member brought a part of the meal.

Secret pal Valentines were exchanged. Some members and husbands enjoyed a game of pool while others relaxed and reminisced.

Some members enjoyed fellowship and breakfast at the Farmer's Wife Restaurant on March 2 for a morning break.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

This morning the sun is shining after several rainy days. The house is quiet except for the ticking of the clocks. After working on the farm a few hours, my husband has decided to drive to the mountains to "see" his camper. I doubt it has run away.

He has always been very interested in maps and studies them like some people study the Bible. When he drive on a road hundreds of miles from home, he remembers it 20 years later. So, since he recalls roads, I don't need to.

History has always fascinated me. My mother often talked of olden times and some of her stories have been written down. If she were living, she would be more than 100 years old. Apparently, her mother was also good at recalling stories of her youth as she lived on a farm near Farmersville.

Thus when a friend invited me to her house to look over some "old papers" I was glad to accept the invitation. She keeps them in an old feed bag with a red rooster printed on the front. She pulled out wills, deeds and sale bills. One unusual name, to me, was Eusebius Hershey. The last name is familiar to me but not the first.

Farms were called plantations and sometimes woodlots were sold separately. About 1850 a 207-acre property brought $14,462.87½ at a public sale. Other items listed as sold were: churn buck $1, slop bucket .60, stew kettle .90, butter print .25, oven scraper & peel $1, bed cords .90, snuffer .06, spice box .75, night stool .01, pewter dish .30, and pumpkin cutter .02.

Animals were sold too and an old brown mare brought $5.12½ while a red and white cow was $27.50. I'm sure most of the small items listed above are no longer around but if they still existed, they would be quite valuable.

Cook's Question Corner

ANSWER — D.R. Newsom, Cooperstown, N.Y., wanted recipes for a variety of stuffed mushrooms. Thanks to Dar Brosius, Chatham, for sending the following.

Mushrooms Stuffed With Shrimp, Cheese, & Chives

1 pound medium sized mushroom, remove stems and reserve for another use. Clean the mushroom caps and then brush them with melted butter.

¼ pound cooked tiny bay shrimp, coarsely chopped

3 packages (3 ounces each) cream cheese and chives, softened

½ cup garlic croutons, crushed into crumbs

½ cup grated Swiss cheese

Paremsan cheese, grated

Paprika

Combine the shrimp, cream cheese, croutons, Swiss cheese, and mix until blended. Mound mixture into prepared mushroom caps. Sprinkle tops generously with grated parmesan cheese and sprinkle lightly with paprika. Bake in 350 degree oven until piping hot. Broil for a few seconds. Serve immediately.

Mushrooms Stuffed With Clams & Herbs

½ pound mushrooms, clean and remove stems. Brush with melted butter

1 cup crushed herbed stuffing mix (measure after crushing)

4 tablespoons melted butter

1 or 2 cloves garlic, mashed

¼ teaspoon Italian Herb Seasoning

1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley

1 tablespoon finely chopped onion

½ teaspoon paprika

2 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

7-ounce can minced clams, drained, reserve broth

Prepare mushrooms. Toss together the remaining ingredients except the clam broth. Now, slowly add some of the clam broth until the stuffing holds together. Stuffing should not be soggy or too dry. Divide filling and mound into mushroom caps, filling them loosely. Sprinkle tops with a little extra grated parmesan and paprika. Place on cookie sheet and heat at 350 degrees until piping hot. Broil for a few seconds to brown.

Mushrooms Stuffed With Feta, Green Onion & Garlic

1 pound medium mushrooms, clean and remove stems. Baste with melted butter

8 ounces Feta cheese, mashed

½ cup cream cheese

½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

½ cup chopped green onions

¼ cup parsley

1 egg

½ cup galic croutons, crushed into crumbs

Prepare mushrooms. Combine the remaining ingredients and stir until the mixture is well blended. Fill the mushrooms, mounding the mixture high into the caps. Bake in 350 degree oven until piping hot. Broil for a few seconds to lightly brown. Serves six as an appetizer.

ANSWER — D.R. Newsom, Cooperstown, N.Y., wanted a recipe for black walnut chiffon cake. Thanks to Nancy Kramer, Newmanstown, for sending a recipe.

Black Walnut Chiffon Cake

Measure and sift together into mixing bowl:

2¼ cups cake flour (spoon lightly into cup)

1½ cups sugar

3 teaspoons baking powder

1 teaspoon salt

Make a well and add in the following order:

½ cup vegetable oil

5 unheated egg yolks, reserve whites

¾ cup cold water

2 teaspoons vanilla

Beat with spoon until smooth. Measure into large mixing bowl:

1 cup egg whites (7 or 8)

½ teaspoons cream of tartar

Whip until whites form very stiff peaks. Do not underbeat!

Pour yolk mixture gradually over whipped whites gently folding with spatula until just blended. Do not stir. Sprinkle over top of batter, gently folding in with a few strokes:

1 cup chopped black walnuts

Pour into ungreased pan immediately. Bake in 10x4-inch tube pan at 325 degrees for 55 minutes. Increase heat to 350 degrees and bake an additional 10-15 minutes or until top springs back when lightly touched.

Make be baked in an oblong 13x9½ x2-inch pan at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes.

Instead of vanilla flavoring, use ¼ to ½ teaspoon black walnut flavoring. Immediately after baking, turn pan upside down, resting on funnel or two other pans. Let hang until cooled.

ANSWER — Mary Paxton, Honey Grove, wanted kitchen helps and tips from readers. Here are some from Lisa Sparr.

- When crushing crackers for pie crusts, topping for casseroles, etc., place crackers in a piece of plastic wrap and push down all sides of the wrap to seal it. Use a rolling pin to crush.
- Refresh your spice shelf every year or so. Tarragon, chervil, basil and some other delicate ones may not last that long. Whole leaf varieties keep better than powdered or ground ones.
- Using bananas in dessert? Toss them with cream sherry. The wine will flavor the fruit and keep it from darkening.
- Boiling a little winegar will eliminate unpleasant cooking odors.
- Homemade vanilla extract is made by combining 1 cup brandy and 2 vanilla beans cut into one-inch pieces. Combine in a jaar with a tight fitting lid. Cover and let stand 3 months, shaking three times a week. Yield: one cup.
- When using a glass pan, decrease the oven temperature 25 degrees.
- When adding flour to cake batter, do not overmix.
- Always stir rice with a fork to prevent gummy rice.
- After fluting the edge of pastry, press or crimp under rim in several places to prevent shrinkage.
- Arrowroot is ideal for thickening pie fillings since it becomes very clear upon thickening and does not cover any natural flavor.
- To prevent brown sugar from hardening, store in a covered container. Insert a damp paper towel or napkin in the lid. If brown sugar has hardened, the same treatment will soften it.
- Strong-flavored vegetables require more seasoning than mild-flavored vegetables.
- When sauces are made in a double boiler never allow the water in the bottom boiler to touch the bottom of the top boiler.
- Use three times as much fresh herb as dried. If a recipe calls for one teaspoon dried, use 3 teaspoons fresh.
- Bay leaves and whole cloves keep ants and pests out of cupboards.
- Hang cheesecloth bags of yarrow, mint, and lavender in your closets and cupboards to repel moths and sweeten the air.
- Fresh parsley will freshen your breath.

New Grape IPM Manual Available

GENEVA, N.Y. — A new IPM manual, Grape IPM in the Northeast, came off the press last month, in plenty of time to make a significant difference for the 1996 grape growing season.

As the authors, Tim Weigle and Joe Kovach, explain in the introduction, this manual represents an attempt "to put in one place all the information on grape IPM that is contained in fact sheets, bulletins, and pest management recommendations prepared by faculty, staff, extension specialists and agents from Cornell and Penn State Universities."

Grape pest management, traditionally centered around calendar- or phenology-based pesticide applications, needs to change to meet the current conditions of increased regulation of pesticides and growing concern about environmental safety. Grape IPM in the Northeast provides research-based, field-tested IPM alternatives to the old ways of managing pests.

A vineyard past management calendar, with detailed sections on each of 13 growth stages, takes up the first 27 pages of the manual. Following this overview are appendices on disease, insect, and weed management, chock full of articles, bulletins, and color fact sheets on pests, weather equipment, and economics. The final appendix conotains New York's Food and Life Sciences Bulletin 139, A Method to Measure the Environmental Impact of Pesticides.

New York's grape production ranks third in the nation and Pennsylvania's, fifth. Valued at $40.5 million and occupying 33,000 acres (bearing age), grapes are the second most valuable fruit crop in the stats.

Concord is the dominant variety in the Lake Erie region, and French hybrids and Vitis vinifera cultivars are common in the Finger Lakes, Hudson Valley, Long Island, and southeastern Pennsylvania.

Grape IPM in the Northeast sells for $30 and is available from the Resource Center in Ithaca (phone: 607-255-2080; FAX: 607-255-9946; e-mail: dist—center@cce.cornell.edu). Please use order code 139IPM119.

The publication was funded by a grant from the Extension Service of the USDA.

It was edited and produced by IPM staff writer Margaret Haining Cowles, with cover design by Elaine Gotham and printing by Communications Services at Cornell's New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y.

National Dairy Council Reviews Dietary Guidelines

ROSEMONT, Ill. — "The U.S. departments of Health and Human Services and Agriculture and the committee members who represented them are to be congratulated for their work in developing the 1995 Dietary Guidelines for Americans," said Greg Miller, Ph.D., F.A.C.N., vice president of nutrition research for the National Dairy Council®.

"Given the growing body of nutrition information and the ever-changing lifestyles of Americans, the new guidelines represent a complex but important step toward directing our country's eating habits."

The 1995 edition of the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, as released recently, are intended to be the primary source of dietary information for Americans over the age of two. To reflect new nutritional findings, the guidelines are reviewed and revised, if necessary, every five years.

"As the new guidelines are put to use," added Miller, "we're hopeful future discussions will build upon today's announcement by taking into consideration the many studies which indicate that children have different nutritional needs than adults."

In a recent National Dairy Council survey, 72 percent of health care and nutrition professionals surveyed said separate dietary guidelines for children would be useful. Several national nutrition organizations share this belief, including The American Dietetic Association, the American Institute of Nutrition, the National Dairy Council and the American College of Nutrition.

"Nutritional guidelines for children need to consider several aspects even when dealing with health maintenance," said Carolyn Abitbol, M.D., F.A.A.P., F.A.C.N., representative of the American College of Nutrition. "The different phases of growth — infancy, childhood and adolescence — should be addressed with attention towards physical, neurological and emotional growth."

These phases of growth are recognized in the National Institutes of Health Consensus Statement on Optimal Calcium Intake. The statement recommends varying levels of calcium intake throughout an individual's life.

For example, NIH recommends that a child of five years of age consume 800 mg of calcium daily, whereas they recommend an individual of 15 years of age consume between 1,200 mg and 1,500 mg of calcium daily.

Rebecca Mullis, Ph.D., R.D., president of the Society for Nutrition Education, suggests the guidelines be communicated as consistent scientific message targeted to specific audience segments, such as children and parents.

"Americans' food choices are influenced by diverse interests, beliefs, age, income levels and ethnicity — the language within the guidelines should reflect this diversity," Mullis said.

The guidelines were developed to communicate to Americans the components of a healthy diet to reduce the risk of chronic disease. The guidelines evolved from the Dietary Goals for the United States, which was issued by the U.S. Senate Select Committee of Nutrition and Human Needs in 1977.

The National Dairy Council is a non-profit organization that initiates nutrition research, implements education programs and communicates scientific information on nutrition issues to health professionals, educators and others concerned about fostering a healthier society. NDC is a division of Dairy Management Inc.

Three workers at the Mini-Farm Show included Minni Young, Emmaus; Farm Show co-chairperson Diane Schlauck, Slatington, and women's committee chairperson Nancy Semmel, Schnecksville.

Agriculture was king during the Lehigh County Mini Farm Show. More than 5,000 people attended the event, which included the building of a giant ice cream sundae.

Lehigh Holds Mini Farm Show

NEW TRIPOLI (Lehigh Co.) — More than 5,000 people attended the weekend celebration of the Lehigh County Mini Farm Show held at Trexlertown Mall recently.

Kick-off of the event, sponsored by the Lehigh County Farm Bureau, was a giant ice cream sundae made by Turkey Hill Farm. The masterpiece contained 126 gallons of ice cream, 5 gallons chocolate syrup, 5 gallons strawberries, and 20 pounds of pecans. More than 2,600 ample servings were dished in less than two hours.

The mall was filled to capacity with agriculture exhibits, displays, and demonstrations. Four-H club members operated a petting zoo with 20 animals and displayed food and clothing projects. They also sold homebaked projects.

The Old Time Plow Boys displayed old tractors and equipment and sold farm toys. The Antique Engine, Tractor, and Toy Club displayed hit and miss engines and other antique items.

Quilting, spinning and weaving were demonstrated by several community groups.

Other events included a square dance, a fashion show, line dancing, and contests for children.

To assist in funding the event, about $2,000 was raised through a Friday night auction featuring donated items from farmers, agribusinesses, and mall merchants. Chances for a quilt were sold.

Educational exhibits included one of a market basket of items. Viewers were asked to guess how much money a farmer received from the $40 charged by supermarkets for the items. The person with the closest guess won the food.

Food samples were handed out by Hatfield Quality Meats, Alderfer Meats, Kuntzler and Leidy, Beatrice, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, and Weis Markets.

When the Pa. Farm Bureau women's committee planned the show, they concentrated on educating non-farm consumers.

Bullriders To Converge On Farm Show Complex

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the 5th consecutive year, "the bad boys of rodeo"—bulls and bullriders—will converge on the Harrisburg Farm Show Complex for Bullride Mania on April 19-21.

In addition to the Toro Twisters (bull riders), special added attractions can be added to the largest bull riding event in the northeastern United States. Country singer Bryan White will appear Friday night only, and Jake, the "world's biggest barrel racing horse," Saturday and Sunday only.

Bryan White has been nominated as "Male Star of Tomorrow" for TNN's Music City News 1995 country awards.

Fans on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon will meet "Jake," a five-year-old dapple gray barrel racing horse who stands 17.1 hands high and weighs more than 2,000 pounds. When the registered Percheron isn't barrel racing, he competes in jumping, pleasure, and driving.

Appearing all three days will be animal trainers Tim and Teresa Lepard with the Ghost Riders. The Ghost Riders are three hilarious monkeys saddled up and riding border collies in an exhibition that appeals to all ages.

For the fifth consecutive year, "the bad boys of rodeo" —bulls and bullriders—will converge on the Harrisburg Farm Show Complex for Bullride Mania on April 19-21.

Increase Profits, Decrease Costs With System

MADISON, Wis.—It is becoming more and more apparent that succeeding at dairy farming in the future requires producers to develop better management skills.

Though this can take many forms, one of the best ways is with the new Bou-Matic ProVantage™ Integrated Management System, according to Ron Curran, product manager.

"With the ProVantage system, operators now have access to vast amounts of information. They can track the amount of milk each cow is producing at each milking; measure milk conductivity; evaluate herd health trends, the effects of feed and environmental changes; and calculate profit over feed cost to spot unprofitable cows," Curran said.

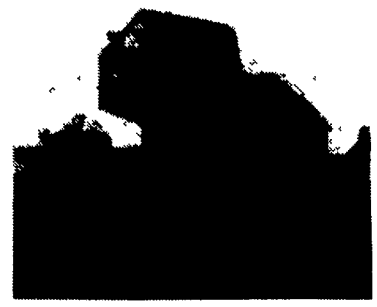
Dubbed the "Five Levels of ProVantage," he explains that each level represents a different management strategy. As the producer ascends through the levels, the amount of automation increases, as well as the amount of information the operator can get from each cow.

Round Baler Makes Four-Foot Bales

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new New Holland Model 634 round baler forms dense 4x4-foot, 650-pound bales in dry hay. A 40 HP tractor is ample power for the new machine, said New Holland product management.

The Model 634 is a compact unit that shares features of larger New Holland round balers, according to the company. The pickup has closely spaced curved tines and is nearly a foot wider than the bale chamber to gather short, fine materials, even in bunchy windrows. The additional pickup width crowds materials into the sides of the bale chamber for tight, firmer bale ends.

The new "634" forms bales by a combination of rolls and heavy-duty 3-ply belts that minimize leaf loss. In operation, most of the bale weight is carried by the floor roll. Pivoting front rolls provide a large core-forming area for quicker core formation even in short, dry slippery materials. Pressure increases as the bale forms to increase bale density. The electric twine system applies two strands of twine at the same time to minimize wrapping time.



The new New Holland Model 634 round baler forms 4x4-foot, 650 pound bales. It requires a 40 HP tractor. The new baler shares design features of larger machines. Bales are formed by a combination of rolls and heavy-duty belts to minimize leaf loss.

Newtown Square Farmer Overcomes Challenges

NEWTOWN SQUARE (Delaware Co.) — "Farming in southeastern Pennsylvania is a lot more challenging than farming in many areas of the country," said Rick Schlosberg, who farms nearly 2,000 acres surrounding Newtown Square. "I've farmed here on my own for 15 years and survived because I had to be progressive in thinking, meticulous in practice, and always trying new and better ways to get things done."

Some of those challenges come from the land itself — erosion, rocks, weeds. Others arise from the population — land prices, taxes, traffic, fears of crop protection chemicals, damaging deer populations. Like other southeastern Pennsylvania farmers, Schlosberg has fought to overcome these challenges. Here's how.

"Most of the ground around here is classified as highly erodible. If farmers want to stay in the program, whatever that is right now, they must maintain residue levels," Schlosberg said. "What easier way is there than no-till?"

Schlosberg began no-tilling in 1981 to reduce labor inputs in his one-man operation. Additional benefits soon followed. With less tillage, he found that he pulled fewer rocks up to the soil surface, leaving them too deep to damage equipment or slow down fieldwork. Soil quality improved. Erosion lessened.

He reports that no-till yields remain equal with conventional fields in normal years, and even higher in dry years.

According to Schlosberg, no-till requires more intensive management than conventional tilalge.

"You have to be willing to work with no-till and at no-till until you get it right. Many farmers don't no-till don't no-till because of bad first-year experiences," he said.

Selection of seed and herbicide inputs are critical. Schlosberg exclusively uses Pioneer corn hybrids, but not only the most "popular" numbers. Nearly 50 percent of his corn acres are second-year corn fields, which affects his hybrid selection.

"I tend to use a short-season corn variety on what or soybean fields, maybe a Pioneer 3525 or 3394," Schlosberg said. "It seems that the longer season varieties — Pioneer 3346 or 3217 — have better disease resistance to grey leafspot, which is a greater problem in my corn-on-corn."

Weed control is a matter of timely scouting and proper selection. He scouts his field regularly during the season, at least twice prior to post herbicide applications and once more before harvest. He carries an Infielder computer in his combine to record weed escapes.

Schlosberg said he makes next season's herbicide decisions from the combine during harvest.

"For example, I had always been a big Bicep* user in corn, but began seeing frequent mid-season escapes of giant foxtail. Even spiking the Bicep with extra Dual* didn't work," Schlosberg said. "I rent 100 percent of my land. These weed escapes weren't acceptable to me or my landlords.

"So in 1995, I tried Harness Xtra herbicide on 90 percent of my acres. And, I'll be doing it again this season."

Scouting allowed Schlosberg to identify giant foxtail, fall panicum, and triazine-resistant lambsquarters escapes through the Bicep. Knowing the specific weeds and pressure spots, he could then identify a different herbicide that would provide the control he needed.

"With Harness Xtra, I had excellent long-season control of grasses and triazine-resistant broadleaves," said Schlosberg. "I saw no escape at all for the first time in six years."

In addition, by accurately identifying and reacting to the problems, he saved money because he didn't have to spike the new product with added chemical or come back with resprays.

The suburban sprawl from Philadelphia poses unique problems. Something as simple as moving equipment from field to field or taking grain into the elevator can mean major delays if required during rush hours.

To deal with congestion, Schlosberg owns a Peterbilt tractor-trailer in which he can haul 1,000 bushels of corn per load. During the height of harvest, Schlosberg hires a second tractor-trailer to reduce the amount of time spent on congested roads.

"The traffic will actually influence my decisions as far as moving equipment," he said. "If I finish up at one farm at 4:30 p.m. or 5 p.m., we may just take a two-hour break or wait until morning."

Increased urban population brings with it a fear of crop protection chemicals. It is common today for farm leases in the area to include chemical use clauses.

"Most of what the non-farm community sees about crop protection chemicals, or 'pesticides,' is coming from a negative bias to start with," Schlosberg said. "That negative bias can make things miserable for farmers."

A severe side-effect of the suburban sprawl is increased deer populations. Hunting in the area has decreased due to liability concerns and lack of interest among urban residents. This can mean real problems for farmers, going so far as to restrict crop rotation options.

"Even on my farms where deer are not a major problem, I will still lose five to 10 percent of my soybean yields to deer," Schlosberg said. "I can't even grow soybeans on half of my farms."

Thus, Schlosberg is forced to farm corn-on-corn, increasing weed and disease pressure and reducing yield potential.

As more people move out of the city, land values and taxes increase, making it increasingly difficult for new farmers to own their own land.

"I would love to own 2,000 acres of land, don't get me wrong. But for now, renting is my best option," Schlosberg said. "My rent is reasonable now, and I don't have to worry with land taxes."

Schlosberg lives on one of the farms he rents in Newtown Square with his wife, Alicia, and their 16-mont old son, Sam. Would he like to pass the farm down to Sam someday?

"I would love to," he said. 'But by the time he's old enought to do any farming, it will be amazing if there is any farm ground left in this area.

"I've learned to overcome the challenges of farming in an urban setting," he said. "It will serve me well even if we have to buy some ground somewhere else someday. I still want to farm, even if it's not in southeastern Pennsylvania."

TREAT YOUR SEED TO THE PRECISION-CONTROLLED ENVIRONMENT OF THE EARLY RISER® PLANTER.

Perfect seedbed conditions are not the norm in today's conservation-minded environment. More and more residue is the rule, not the exception. That's why every seedbed presents its own unique challenge. • First-Class Treatment. No matter what the seedbed, a Case IH Early Riser planter treats every seed to a Precision-Controlled Environment. Each seed is set at just the proper depth and soil pressure, and at just the right population, for fast germination and emergence. • In fact, independent studies have shown the Cyclo Air® metering system provides the most accurate population control of all planters (and is also one of the simplest, with just three moving parts). And no other planter on the market can match the simplicity and speed of its big central-fill seed hopper. • Seedbed Precision. No part of seedbed preparation is shortchanged by the Early Riser row unit. Exclusive offset double-disk Earth Metal® openers slice through soil and residue. "Walking beam" gauge wheels help maintain constant depth, and are followed by a furrow-defining firming point • After the seed drops, covering disks and a press wheel carefully close the furrow for excellent seed-to-soil contact, improved germination and fast emergence. • It's a seedbed that no seed can resist. • New For 1996. The Case IH 955 Series Early Riser planters now feature an improved offset opener arrangement for easier tracking and pulling in mulch, ridge- and no-till fields. Plus, each planter uses quick-adjustable downpressure springs to handle changing soil conditions. And most models now feature bolt-on row units for further customization. • See your Case IH dealer today about the new Case IH 955 Series Early Riser planters... the ones that really know how to treat a seed.

Feeling Stressed? A Psychologist Offers Ways To Cope

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Stress is something everyone must face, no matter who you are, according to a licensed psychologist.

But a valuable tool to handle stress is to meet with others who experience the same kinds of stress and talk about ways to cope, according to Dr. Adam S. Wilikofsky, assistant director, family and community medicine at Lancaster General Hospital.

'Worry is like a rocking chair — it gives you something to do and doesn't get you anywhere.'

Wilikofsky spoke about stress management to about 16 members of the Solanco Young Farmers Association last week at Solanco High School.

Groups such as the young farmers, which meet on a regular basis, are "invaluable" for dealing with stress, said Wilikofsky.

"It's good to have other people to talk to. It helps to talk about the problems," he said. "It gives you a sense that you're not alone."

Wilikofsky treats many professionals in his practice with the Lancaster Health Alliance. He has seen the mental and emotional deterioration that can occur to people who can't or won't find ways to deal successfully with stress.

The psychologist told the story of a New York City advertising executive who, burdened with stress, looks out the window at his little block of blue sky and decides to end his career and become a farmer, perhaps to return to a "simpler" way of life. At the same time, a farmer in the Midwest, saddled by drought, walks out into the cornfields and, after looking up into the endless blue sky, realizes that if rain doesn't come soon, all is lost. The farmer thinks perhaps it's better to sell the farm and get an office job somewhere, perhaps in the city, where life must be better.

"It doesn't matter what you do, there's always going to be stress," said Wilikofsky.

Wilikofsky spoke about the "three C's" of stress management and how people who are successful at managing stress learn to cope:

'It's good to have other people to talk to. It helps to talk about the problems,' he said. 'It gives you a sense that you're not alone.'

- Challenge. Those who can successfully deal with stress look at stressful situations not as difficulties, but as potential challenges.
- Commitment. Those who are successful look at the long-term picture and set long-term objectives. If stress occurs, it is something that must be endured on the short haul to reach the more important, all-encompassing long-term goals.
- Control. People who must endure stress need to avoid the fatalist attitude that forces them to believe all is lost. They must ensure themselves they are still in control. Stress affects people hardest when they think they have little or no control of a situation.

Wilikofsky examined some of the common stresses faced at work or at home, including:

- Disappointment. Everybody faces a letdown for something at one time or another. To deal with disappointment, it's better to step back and "take a larger perspective." That includes thinking about how truly miserable those in developing countries have it compared to the average daily U.S. worker. It's essential to have the right attitude and to be more assertive. "Start doing things," said Wilikofsky, to "resolve the problem. Don't focus on the aggravation." Farmers must focus on the causes of the problem and not "blame ourselves." He said, "Figure out what you're going to do and start to do it."
- Change. This includes death of a loved one, loss of job, and the subsequent worries, anxiety, and

A valuable tool is to meet with others who experience the same kinds of stress and talk about ways to cope, according to Dr. Adam S. Wilikofsky, left, assistant director, family and community medicine at Lancaster General Hospital. At right is Ronald Althoff, Solanco Young Farmer Association adviser.

A Psychologist Offers Ways To Cope

loss of sleep. Control is lost and "you feel helpless." To deal with this, "avoid catastrophizing" and allowing the stress to build up to where more problems are created. It's also important not to "overrationalize" and say you don't care when you really do.

• Job-related stress. This is a feeling that "your input doesn't really count," he said. Be more assertive to resolve the problems or change your place of employment. And don't waste time on things that you simply cannot change.

• Money. In a survey conducted years ago by the magazine Psychology Today, Wilikofsky said that 71 percent of the respondents said the subject of money "makes them anxious." Fifty-two percent indicated that thinking about money "makes them depressed." About the subject of money, 51 percent noted it "makes them angry." People have trouble with money, and at issue is "control." Many can't keep track of money and many believe what little they have is taken by forces out of their control. In this case, a budget may be practical and even necessary for those who have a lot of money. Again, being assertive and taking action is critical. Long-term planning and budgeting can help alleviate stress.

Wilikofsky indicated that 15 percent of the total U.S. population is comprised of 'chronic worriers.'

Wilikofsky spoke about "stress intensifiers" that can make a stressful situation even worse. They include:

• Frustration. This is the same as catastrophizing or focusing on the frustrations.

• Perfectionism. This is the belief that we can do everything perfectly and there is no margin for error. "This can really be paralyzing," he said. He said that the overall product is important, not the small errors. "I dare you to find a newspaper with no typo in it."

• Worry. According to a recent survey, Wilikofsky indicated that 15 percent of the total U.S. population is comprised of "chronic worriers." That means about 37.5 million people worry more than eight hours a day. "Worry is like a rocking chair — it gives you something to do and doesn't get you anywhere." The important thing is to get control of worry, assimilate it, make it a part of your life, but recognize you need to take a "respite from worry" to give yourself strength.

'Start doing things,' said Wilikofsky, to 'resolve the problem. Don't focus on the aggravation.'

How do successful stress managers cope? There are several ways, according to the Lancaster General Hospital psychologist. Here's a list:

• Cognitive reframing. So many people stick by the belief, the "fallacy of fairness," that the world is a fair place, and everybody can get his or her fair share. This is simply not true. Those who can cope can make a list that details the stressful event, the immediate reaction to the event, and learn to focus on the "rational response." An example: the car won't start in the morning. The immediate response can be "it's going to be a bad day."

But the rational, controlled response is realizing the car hasn't had a tune-up in three years and the engine sounded funny, so perhaps it needed work that was avoided. The important thing is, the day is not lost.

• Time management. People need to learn to prioritize items for a day and not be unreasonable. Hoping to do something in one hour that takes two hours can cause stress. Now that tax deadline is fast approaching, it has become more important to "tend to taxes first rather than (to repair) Aunt Sadie's creeking door." Perform projects in small steps; that way, a project that appears large and overwhelming can be accomplished.

• Assertiveness. Those who can cope best have the ability to say "no" to things they really don't want to do. They have learned to assert themselves in a clear, calm, rational, positive way.

• Relaxation technique. This involves deep breathing, meditation, or other methods to help relieve stress. But this requires a commitment in terms of time.

• Exercise. There are lots of data supporting the boosted physical and emotional well-being that consistent exercise provides. But this also requires a strong commitment to have positive effects. Also, this includes eating well (avoiding junk foods), getting sufficient sleep, and recreation.

• Social support. Groups such as the young farmers often act as therapy to deal with some of the problems of stress. Through the experience of others, they provide an outlet and a way of communicating effective ways to handle stress.

Ag Students Prepare For Celebration

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Every year, on the last Saturday in April, College of Agriculture and Natural Resources students show that agriculture goes beyond farming and is a unique and growing part of the urban-oriented University of Maryland at College Park (UMCP).

The 71st anniversary of Agriculture Day at UMCP will take place on April 27, rain or shine, and will provide activities involving new dimensions of agriculture, as well as long-time favorites. The festive atmosphere will include a bug zoo, educational and computer displays, livestock fitting and showing, a petting zoo, food concessions and live entertainment.

"Many people will be surprised by the way in which agriculture touches their lives," said Dr. Marla McIntosh, associate dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. "Ag Day will involve many active learning displays, entertaining events and demonstrations that allow people to discover what's new and exciting in agriculture."

Some of those active learning displays are the Heart Smart Nutrition computer demonstration, which includes a diet assessment; Kids Growing with Grains, where kids of all ages can make grain sculptures; an aquaculture system; World wide Web demonstrations to "surf" the best agricultural web sites; and a tour of the university's state-of-the-art pilot processing plant to see ice cream made.

Student representives from 12 clubs will be selling food, plants, T-shirts, and goldfish. The UM Calvary will sell golden horseshoes and calvary hats, and present a videotaped educational drill. The Institute of Applied Agriculture will have a putting green to show how fields of study like turf management affect recreation.

Most activities will take place in the livestock barns area and the Animal Science/Ag Engineering Complex at the intersection of Regents Drive and Farm Drive. The event will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and parking and admission are free.

Ag Day is sponsored each year by the Agricultural Student Council at UMCP, with cooperation from student organizations in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. The council chose "Maryland's Urban Country—Still Making History" as the theme for this year's Ag Day.

"The theme really reflects agriculture in this area and points out that it's still a viable industry," said Allison Miller of Gaithersburg, president of Agriculture Student Council. "The fure of agriculture is exploring science and technology, and Ag Day is a way to learn about the industry while having something of interest for people of all age." Miller is an animal sciences senior at the University of Maryland.

Ag Day at Maryland has been an annual event since 1925. It is one of the oldest collegiate agriculture showcases in the nation.

Beef Evaluation Program Set

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — All beef producers are invited to attend an On-Foot On-Rail Beef Evaluation Workshop to increase their skills at evaluating live animals. This event is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension in southeast Pennsylvania and Berks/Southeast Cattlemen.

The sessions will be as follows:

•Live Evaluation, April 23 at Leesport Farmer's Market, Rt. 61, North of Leesport. Live Evaluation: 7:30 p.m.

•Carcass Evalution, April 25 at Peters Bros. Meats, Lenhartsville, Lenhartsville Exit of Rt. 78 (22) just off Rt. 143 in Lenhartsville. Carcass Evaluation: 7:30 p.m.

On Tuesday evening, April 23, each animal will be evaluated by everyone attending. Animals will be judged on quality grade, yield grade, size of rib eye and depth of fat over rib and overall characteristics as a beef animal. Tony Reed, a cattle buyer from Moyer's Packing, will help with the Live Evaluation. At the Live Evaluation, Jeff Mamett from Upjohn will conduct a quality assurance discussion including site injections and other concerns.

On Thursday, April 25, Chester Hughes, extension agent in Lancaster County, will evaluate each carcass for dressing percentage, marbling score, maturity, quality grade, rib eye area, fat over rib, and yield grade.

The cost is $2 for non-members of the Berks/Southeast Cattlemen. There will be no cost for members who have paid their 1996 dues. Cattle producers interested in having one of their animals evaluted are welcome to enter a steer, heifer, bull or cow. To register and for more information, contact Clyde A.B. Myers, Berks County Cooperative Extension, at (610) 378-1327.

New from – Great Plains

12' End Wheel No-Till Drill

No-Till technology and maximum productivity in a 12' size

All of the benefits of Great Plains no-till technology are now available in a new 12 foot size. The new 12' End Wheel No-Till drill is designed to handle the planting needs of small to medium sized operations with maximum productivity.

Built to the high quality standards of Great Plains, the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill will plant in the most demanding of no-till conditions with extreme accuracy.

The end wheel design makes this drill extremely maneuverable. Keeping all ground-working com-ponents in-line with the end wheels prevents openers from bulldozing or bridging when working in rolling terrain. The end wheels also act as stabilizers to hold the openers steady when seeding on slopes.

Excess debris is no problem for this unit. Opener and coulter stagger of 10 3/4" allows trash to flow evenly and freely. No-till coulters create a mini-seedbed allowing openers to concentrate on seed placement.

Planting depth adjustments are quick and easy with the "T"-handle depth control system. State of the art solid seed tubes ensure that the seed exits the chute with "zero motion drop" for ultimate seed placement accuracy. The optional Seed-Lok™ wheel then presses each seed into moist soil for optimum germination

The improved straight-arm, solid stand opener design, combined with the cushioned press wheel provides maximum down pressure with less wear and tear.

The large, welded seed box holds up to 2.4 bushels per foot. Exclusive Great Plains fluted feed seed cups coupled with the 4-speed gearbox deliver outstanding accuracy in varying rates and seeding conditions.

Designed with safety in mind, the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill comes equipped with transport safety lights and a wider walkboard.

Accessories available with the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill include: folding markers, coil tine harrows, seed box agitator and small seeds attachment.

Europe, Japan OK Imports

Two approvals key for importation of Roundup Ready Soybeans into Europe and Japan have been announced.

Regulatory approval to allow importation of whole Roundup Ready soybeans into Japan was granted recently by the Japanese Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries (MAFF). That approval means Roundup Ready soybeans can be imported into as well as cultivated in Japan, based on the safety evaluation by MAFF's Evaluation Expert Committee. Two additional approvals, to allow for consumption of the beans, still are needed in Japan.

Meanwhile, the European Commission confirmed that it officially has cleared the way for Roundup Ready soybeans to be imported and marketed in the 15 member countries of the European Union.

The European decision covers only imported soybeans. No request was made for planting of Roundup Ready soybeans in Europe.

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency: this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Ciba Seeds Canada Receives Transgenic Corn Approval

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Ciba Seeds (a division of Ciba-Geigy Corporation) has announced that Ciba Seeds Canada received the first-ever Canadian governmental approval to produce and sell transgenic European corn borer (ECB)-resistant hybrids in Canada.

Commonly referred to as Bt corn, Ciba's Maximizer™ hybrids contain Knockout™ built-in corn borer control. These hybrids produce a protein that protects against European corn borer, an insidious insect that can cause devastating yield losses. The Canadian approval follows U.S. regulatory approval that was received last summer.

Ciba Seeds is excited by this opportunity to help corn growers strengthen integrated pest management systems while improving profitability. By growing Ciba Seeds Maximizer Corn Hybrids, corn growers can expect yield advantage, higher test weight, and improved stalk quality.

"Exhaustive testing with rigorous federal review assures Canadians this biological innovation provides safe environmental, social, and economic benefits to the agri-food industry," said Bruce Hunter, manager, research for Ciba Seeds, Canada. "We are gratified by Ag Canada's efforts to swiftly review our data package and make a decision. Their approval indicates tremendous confidence in the technology."

THE GRASS IS GREEN!
Lisa Holden and Tim Fritz
Penn State University

Spring has sprung, and it's time (or past time) to start grazing. Since forage management and feeding management are tightly linked, this article will focus on both plants and animals.

Spring is often the most challenging time for grazing management. Pastures move from a dormant brown to lush green very quickly.

Put on your seatbelt and be ready to go, for the 1996 grazing season is here!

As we begin the grazing season, let's take a walk down that lane with the animals and think about a few things.

•The pasture: Cool season grasses and clover are either already actively growing or are on the starting blocks ready to kick in gear. Early spring management should focus on attemping to "stage" the paddocks. The heavier you rely on pasture as your forage system, the earlier you should start.

Some grazers start shortly after green up. If you are not started by three inches growth, you will most likely get way behind the grass. Start on southern slopes, early species paddocks such as ryegrass, bluegrass, and orchardgrass, and possibly wet areas (if dry at time of grazing). These areas ususally start growing first. If your farm is relatively uniform, then spring management and getting cows out early is even more important because the whole system starts growing at once. (Fall management also influences the time of green up and can be used as a tool to bring the pasture in different stages.

•When weather conditions are right soon after green up, an explosion of grass occurs which is almost impossible to manage. Your cows should already be transitioned to a pasture ration at this point to maximize pasture intake during this rapid growth period. Don't be caught with your fences down or your lanes full of mud!

Successful grazers are thinking ahead and are ready for the grass explosion. If and when the pasture gets ahead of you, keep the grass vegetative by moving the cows very fast and/or harvesting unneeded paddocks early. The earlier unneeded paddocks are harvested, the earlier they can be returned to the pasture system. If possible, harvest surplus pasture in stages, so that the entire harvested area is not ready for grazing at the same time.

•Balage offers the most flexibility in harvesting small sections of your system. Do not allow your grasses to go to head. (Note: smooth bromegrass and timothy should not be grazed during stem elongation and should be harvested after flowering.) This is sometimes easier said than done but is very important in maintaining productive pastures. Future growth of grasses is reduced if they are allowed to go reproductive. By keeping pastures in an active vegetative growing state, managed pasture will produce higher yields than hay fields.

Other factors to consider:

•Wet weather: If field conditions are wet, graze well drained paddocks with well established sod if possible. Put the animals on only long enough to graze then pull them off to either a barn, concrete area, or a clean sacrifice area. Do not destroy pasture under poor weather conditions unless this is your goal. Remember, your pasture will hopefully be producing high quality forages for the next 6 to 9 months.

•Nitrogen: In most cases, avoid applying nitrogen during green up. If you use commercial nitrogen (many producers rely on legumes to provide nitrogen), apply after the main flush—usually in mid to late spring. If nitrogen is applied during green up, the flush will be even harder to manage.

•The animals: Fresh, new forage is highly palatable and animals will readily consume spring pasture. The key to transition feeding in the early spring season is observing and adjusting for changes in pasture growth. As with any feeding changes, more gradual adaption to new feedstuffs will help the rumen microbes to positively adjust. Changes in pasture growth (and availability) can be observed visually in the paddocks as well as by changes in refusals at the bunk. Rotating animals through paddocks quickly not only helps to stage pasture growth, but also helps to increase pasture intake more slowly and helps the rumen adapt. Start grazing animals as early as possible. Maintaining a high dry matter intake should always be your first goal, so keep enough high quality feed (TMR, stored forages, etc.) available, especially when beginning to graze. Remember that cattle do not graze as closely to the ground as sheep, so what may look like an abundance of green growth to you may actually be unavailable to the cow. Adequate feed available in the barn also helps to minimize the risk of bloat, especially with legume pastures.

As the animal's dry matter intake increases, the amount of stored feed that is refused will increase somewhat proportionally. For every pound of dry matter refused from TMR or high quality forage, the cow is eating about a pound of dry matter from pasture or about 5-7 pounds of wet material. Spring pasture is about 15-20 percent dry matter and generally higher in protein and energy and lower in fiber than most stored forages. Plan ahead by working with your nutritionist to decide how often your rations will need to be adjusted.

It is best to avoid very frequent ration changes, because they can upset the rumen environment. However, a decline in milk production is easy to avoid by balancing a new ration ahead of time based on estimated changes in pasture intake, rather than making "off the cuff" feed changes. Remember to monitor production, average daily milk production per daily cow or gain per animal for livestock, in order to assess whether your feeding management is effective. With higher grain prices, it is especially important to also monitor changes in feed costs per unit of production (cwt. of milk or pound of grain). Watch for overfeeding of grain as TMR changes with spring grazing. Lactating dairy cows should not be consuming more that 2.5 percent of BW from concentrate. Watch for underfeeding of grain as TMR changes with spring grazing. Drops in milk production and body condition score will result from low energy (low grain) rations.

One final word on feeding impact with spring grazing relates to effective fiber in the ration. Lush spring pasture is often low in neutral detergent fiber (NDF), and rations with finely chopped silages and little or no long hay can result in off-feed problems, rumen acidosis, displaced abomasums, and low fat tests. Monitoring particle size of the TMR, monitoring NDF of the entire ration and using some long hay in the diet can go along way in solving some of these problems. Work with your feed consultant to find a formula that works for you!

Spring can be a very challenging time, especially for new graziers. It takes some intensive management of both the plants and animals to navigate the rough spots, reach your goals, and get a great start grazing those pastures!

1996 Dairy Of Distinction Farms Sought

Kingston (Luzerne Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy Of Distinction Program of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program was first started in 1983 to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by. The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas and manure management are other aspects of the farm operation taken into consideration. Roadside judging is conducted during the month of May. Former winners of past years are also rejudged to ensure they continue to meet the standards of excellence.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk. Applications are available from your state secretary, Pennsylvania: Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 239 Schuyler Avenue, Box 5 , Kingston, Pa. 18704, (717) 283-2204, New York: Carol Weddle, N.Y. Holstein Association, 957 Mitchell Street, Ithaca N.Y. 14851, (607) 273-7591, or New Jersey: August Knispel, R.D. 1, Box 325, Pittstown, New Jersey 08867, (201) 735-4989. All applications muse be completed and returned by April 15th.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, plus Agribusiness organizations. The Pennsylvania Dairy Of Distinction Program is conducted with advice and help by Penn State cooperative extension.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that; if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1). The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.

No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.

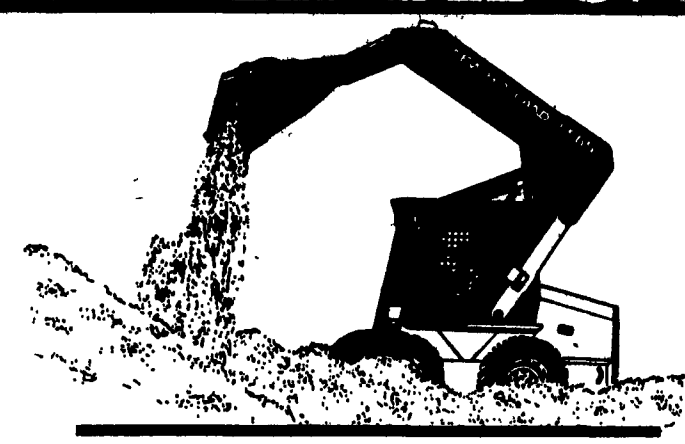
THE RELIABLE ONE



TOUGHER THAN THE REST

The New Holland Model L565 Super Boom™ skid-steer loader is tougher, more durable and more reliable than ever.

The "L565" offers a 40 horsepower diesel engine with an SAE load rating of a powerful 1,500 pounds.

The Pick Up 'n Go™ universal attachment system makes it compatible with New Holland and competitive attachments. The strong boom design and massive loader pins make it more reliable. And the quick engine access makes it easier to service.

See what makes the Super Boom so tough.

NEW HOLLAND

STEADY PERFORMANCE

ON THE JOB DAY-IN, DAY-OUT

New Holland grinder-mixers work hard every day, providing the feeding efficiency you expect from the industry leader.

The rugged harmmermill gives un-matched capacity. Thick plates welded to the 21-3/8" heavy-duty hammermill shaft support the hardened hammers making the mill strong, durable, and smooth-running.

The optional electronic scale more than pays for itself by weighing accurately for more feed efficiency.

Durability...that's why New Holland mills continue to be the market leader.

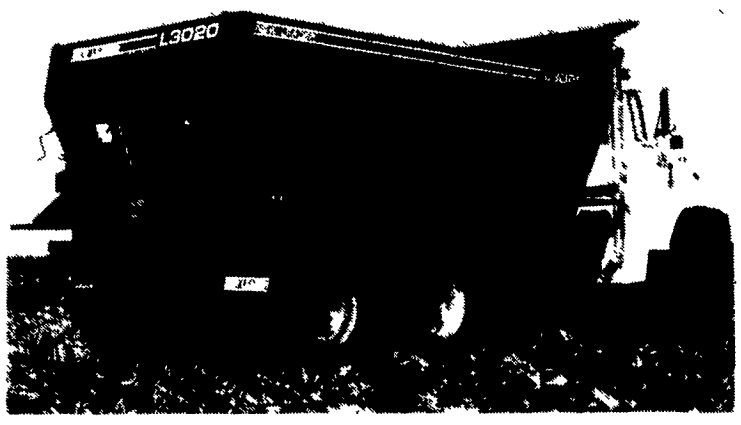
The NEW LEADER L3020

Heavy Duty LIME SPREADER



For more than 50 years, New Leader has aggressively met and exceeded market demand by producing the most dependable, adaptable and durable spreaders in the industry. The heavy-duty L-3020 spreader is a direct result of New Leader's unmatched experience in the agricultural equipment field.

Designed for high-volume applications of ag-lime and gypsum, the rugged and resilient L-3020 is also suitable for spreading fertilizer and hauling aggregate material. Equipped with an optional swinging rear endgate, the L-3020 can be quickly and efficiently converted into a controlled discharge, no-hoist dump system for stockpiling. The L-3020's standard 30-inch-wide conveyor system virtually eliminates the material bridging that's common with narrower conveyor spreaders. The versatile L-3020 broadcasts ag-lime at rates up to six tons per acre and fertilizer at rates as low as 150 pounds per acre.

Other Available Features:

- Complete body in 304 or 409 stainless steel
- Mounts on vehicles equipped with highway, semi or full flotation tires
- An optional ladder that attaches to either the left-or right-hand-side of the unit
- Optional heat-and petroleum - resistant conveyor belting available for transport and application of hot asphalt.

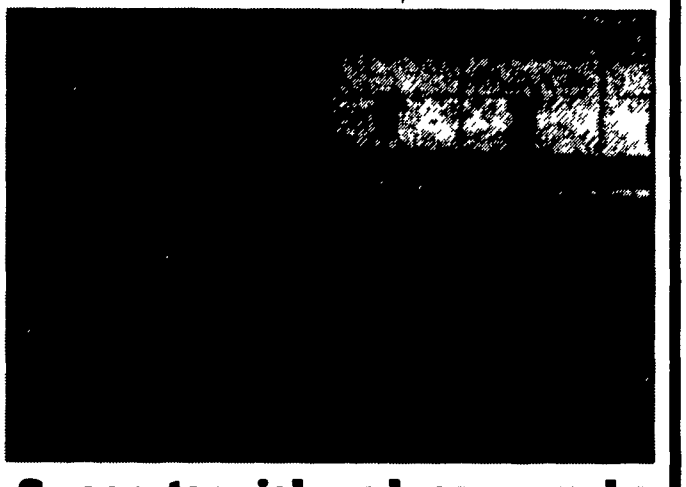
SWEEPSTER

HB SERIES PICK-UP SWEEPER



Sweepster pick-up brooms make a clean sweep every time

Clean-up work is never a problem when you've got a Sweepster hydraulic-drive pick-up sweeper. Hook it up to a skid-steer loader and watch how fast you can pick up dirt, gravel, leaves and other debris.

There are two models, the HB60 and HB72, that mount in place of a bucket. Both units have an over-the-brush pick-up that fills the hopper from the top and sweeps going forward. The hopper then opens hydraulically for easy dumping. The main brush is completely enclosed to keep dust down and eliminate flying debris.
